> Introduction of Foreign Sheep into Russia.

The Emperor of Russia has appropriated the sum of one hundred thou sand roubles in the form of a loan for several years, to the object of improv-ing and enlarging the breed of sheep in his dominions. This amount is to be placed at the disposal of the pro-prietors of Courland and Esthonia, for he term of 18 years, to be then reimbursed without interest. Markets for Libau.

been gradually losing their power and territories. Once the proud owners of stately castles in Palestine, and Sy-ria, and the isless of the Mediterranean, the champions of the cross and the scourges of the Ottoman, the gallant opposers of the mighty Solyman, they have for many years an evidence among others, that the great wheel of change spares noting on earth, but rolls alike over the and honour, and pride and strength, and power, crushing the towers of the mighty, as well as the outtages of the lowly.

In the 'Gazette de France,' of Aug. 31. we find an article relative to Algrers. It recommends the occupation of Algiers by the christians, and that it should be put under the deminion of the knights of St. Jehn. "In the re-establishment of this. freder," says the writter "I trust for the maintenance of the conquest, and I have read with pleasure a letter from Vienna, stating that a certain great Power is about to adopt this principle of re-establishment, although no men-tion is made of the future location of the order which is received. the order, which is nevertheless a mat-ter of considerable question." The writer then considers and answers the objection against the order of St. John—the vow of celibacy, and the mix-ture of religious with military characture of religious with military character. Having answered these, he then considers the claims which the European powers who may unite in conquering Algiers, would advance for their share of the prize, and argues that they are trifling in comparison with the advantages which would arise from bestowing the state upon the knights of St. John.

The close of the article is Arthur of

The close of the article is marthy of translation. "The political existence of Algiers is incompatible with the quiet, the civilization, and the dignity of Europe; besides, her piratical insulence has exceeded all bounds -she tence has exceeded an obunds—she deserves an exemplary chastisement. France cannot conquer Algiers, for herself alone, without exciting jealousies prejudicial to that union on which the strength and safety of Europe depend. It is very easy for a marstime pend. It is very easy for a maratime confederation to take Algiers, and it is very difficult to form a common go vernment for the place. The order of St. John of Jerusalem is the only institution which will suit the purpose. Its misfortunes, its long services, its ancient glory, its unjust deposition, all plead in its behalf, and christian Europe ought eagerly to seize this opportunity for its re-establishment.
