LINES
To the Air—
When smiles light woman's eyes,
When cheer on her cheek appears,
When sweet when she sighs,
When true love breathes
Upon those cheeks,
That hope is fondly twining,
Each dewy gem
That hangs on them,
When smiles light woman's eyes,
When smiles light woman's eyes, &c.

BELZONI.
John Belzoni was the son of a poor butcher at Padua, was born in the year 1788. When a boy he worked at his father's trade, but had a strong desire to see the world. At 15 years of age he left his home, taking his brother Anthony with him, and made his way in the direction of Rome as far as the Apennines. Arrived at this point, and being almost in a state of destitution, the alarms of Anthony, who sat upon a rock, and refused to proceed further, compelled the young traveller to return. Three years after, however, having enlisted a new companion, he started a second time, and then reached Rome in earnest. What Belzoni did at Rome is uncertain. It is said that he applied himself to the study of hydraulics, but we should doubt whether he ever received any regular instructions in that science. In the end, however, being fertile in resources, he took up the trade of a Monk. For want of any better means of livelihood, and remained in that condition until the period of the revolution. Having laid aside the cowl, Belzoni returned to Padua; but finding but little prospect there, in 1806 he proceeded to Holland, proposing to instruct the Dutch in the science of Hydraulics. Apparently, however, there was some miscalculation in this arrangement; the Dutch turned out to know more of Hydraulics than their Italian master; and at the end of twelve months the traveller again appeared in Italy, from whence he proceeded to England in the year 1803. By this time his colossal figure began to develop itself, and his personal strength was in proportion to his exterior appearance. He married a young English woman, and being still something at a loss for a profession, he determined to profit by his curiosity which his personal powers excited, and to exhibit from town to town through Great Britain his Hydraulic experiments and feats of muscular strength. It was a curious spectacle to see this colossal being forward on the stage carrying sometimes as many as 20 men placed in different ways upon his body.

This resource, however, did not last long. The people got tired, and Belzoni was obliged to seek his fortune elsewhere. In 1812 he went with his wife to Portugal, and offered his services at the great theatre of St. Carlos, in Lisbon. The Portuguese speculation did well for a time, but pantomime, called Sampson, was brought out, and Belzoni attracted immense audiences in the principal character; but at length the people here got tired too, and Belzoni went to Malta, where he offered his services as a professor of Hydraulics to Ismael Gibraltar, agent of the Pacha of Egypt. Belzoni's exhibitions as a posture master terminated at this period; but though he was engaged by the Pacha of Egypt, his first essay as a professor of Hydraulics was rather unfortunate. He had been presented to the Viceroy, who employed him to construct a machine to water the gardens of Sautra, a villa which he possessed on the banks of the Nile. The work was performed, and according to Belzoni's account, successfully; but the event was unfortunate, and had nearly proved fatal. The Viceroy took it into his head to put 15 men, besides Belzoni's Irish servant, upon the machine when it was in motion. The result was that an accident occurred. The men were thrown, Belzoni's servant had his thigh broken, and, but for the exertion of his master's personal strength, would have been entirely destroyed. The superstitious temper of the Turkish-tem to regard this event as ominous; and that which, perhaps, went as far in finally knocking up the project, the Pacha discovered that it cost him more to water his gardens with the new machine than it had done by the old system with the ballocks.

Fortunately for Belzoni, he fell at this time into the hands of the consul, Mr. Salt, who, perceiving his capacities, employed him in those works by the performance of which he afterwards acquired so much reputation. His physical powers fitted him admirably for the execution of the new duties intrusted to him. Dressed in the Turkish garb, he handled the Egyptian peasants with the gravity of a Cadi or an Aga; and it is said that he did not scruple to administer personal correction for any failures of duty of which they might be guilty. In his temper, however, and manner, he was mild in general, and unassuming; and Mr. Depping describes his peaceable demeanor as rather curiously contrasted with his Herculean figure and appearance. "One day," says Mr. D. relating his first interview with the eastern traveller, "in the autumn of the year 1821, I saw a man of extraordinary stature enter my house. He was built like a Hercules, and his head touched the top of the door as he came in. His shoulders were broad, and his hair thick and bushy; but his countenance was mild, and there was nothing fierce or alarming in his demeanor. He carried a book under his arm, and was followed by the publisher Gallegani; from which circumstances I instantly guessed that he was an author, though certainly I had never before seen one of such dimensions. If the Patagonians wrote, probably this fellow might be discovered among them. This Hercules, however, explained to me, with great mildness and simplicity, the object of his visit, which was to get a translation made of his Egyptian travels, which had just appeared in English. At the time, I knew very little of the matter, even by reports; but I appreciated his character as soon as I looked over his works; and I was still more astonished when I became acquainted with the detail of his early life; and found the individual who had begun by walking upon stilts, and playing the mountebank for bread, concluded by opening the pyramids of Egypt, and digging out from under a mountain of sand the gigantic temple of Ipsambul." [French paper.]

THE MINUTENESS OF ATOMS.
Gold-beaters can reduce gold to leaves so thin, that two hundred and eighty two thousand must be laid upon each other to produce the thickness of an inch; yet those leaves are perfect or without holes, so that one of them laid upon any surface as in gilding, gives the appearance of solid gold. They are so thin, that if formed into a book, 1500 would occupy the space of a single leaf of common paper; and an octavo volume of an inch thick, would have as many pages as the books of a well stocked ordinary library of 1500 volumes, with 400 pages in each. Still thinner than this is the coating of gold upon the silver wire of what is called gold lace, and we are not sure that such coating is not only one atom thick. Platinum and silver can be drawn into wire much finer than a human hair. A grain of blue vitriol, or carmine, will tinge a gallon of water so that in every drop the colour may be perceived. A grain of musk will scent a room for twenty years, and will have lost little of its weight. The carrion-crow smells its food many miles off. A burning taper, uncovered for a single instant during which it does not lose one thousandth part of a grain, would fill with light a sphere of four miles in diameter, so as to be visible in every part of it. The thread of the silk-worm is so small that many of them are twisted together to form our finest sewing thread; that of the spider is smaller still for two drachms of it by weight would reach from London to Elienburg, or four hundred miles. In the smell of a colub, or in water in which certain vegetables have been infused, the microscope discovers animalcules of which many thousand together do not equal in bulk a grain of sand; and yet nature with a singular prodigality, has supplied many of these with organs as complex as those of the whale or the elephant; and their bodies consist of the same substance, or ultimate atoms, as that of man himself. In a single pound of such matter there are more living creatures than of human beings on the globe. What a scene has the microscope opened to the admiration of the philosophic inquirer! Water, mercury, sulphur, &c. in general any substance, when sufficiently beaten, rises as invisible vapour or gas; that is, it is reduced to the æthereal state. Great heat, therefore, would cause the whole of the material universe to disappear, and the most solid bodies to become as invisible and as insupportable as the air we breathe. Few have contemplated an annihilation of the world more complete than this.—English paper.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.
A very considerable medical writer begs to inform the fair sex, that by too active a use of their fans, they check perspiration; which produces pimples, and an actual change of the complexion.

ANECDOTES.
A chemist in Albany, a few days ago, expatiating on the late discoveries in chemical science, observed that snow had been found to possess a considerable degree of heat. An Irishman present at this remark, observed that truly chemistry was a valuable science, and (fancifully) that the discovery might be made profitable; inquired of the doctor what number of snow balls would be sufficient to burn a tea-kettle.

An Irishman who was employed on the canal last spring at Meigs, was observed one day very intently watching a red-headed wood pecker, who it was tapping a hollow branch tree. On being asked what attracted his attention so marvellously—"I am speaking," said he, "of the strange habit upon summer trees—for sure enough the silly creature has knocked his face against it till his head is all a sore of blood!"

If sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, 75 and '76. It is believed that there are more than two copies of these Journals now extant; and from the circumstances, they were printed in pamphlet form, and unbound, it may be concluded that they, too, must in a few years be destroyed by the mere decay of time. These Journals are the authentic evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. Altho' we have, in abundance, historical Maryland, as connected with the Declaration of Provinces and Colonies, that time formed, for mutual protection against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these works ought what may be termed its Domestic Internal Political History.
This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to hold down to posterity, not only on account of its deep interest, but as a part of the State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during the period of doubt and dismay.
In the confident expectation that citizens of Maryland will consider the proposed publication of sufficient importance to induce them to purchase, the Subscriber is induced to propose the following terms.

PROPOSAL
FOR PRINTING
The Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland, in the years 1774, 1775 and 1776.
If sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, 75 and '76. It is believed that there are more than two copies of these Journals now extant; and from the circumstances, they were printed in pamphlet form, and unbound, it may be concluded that they, too, must in a few years be destroyed by the mere decay of time. These Journals are the authentic evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. Altho' we have, in abundance, historical Maryland, as connected with the Declaration of Provinces and Colonies, that time formed, for mutual protection against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these works ought what may be termed its Domestic Internal Political History.
This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to hold down to posterity, not only on account of its deep interest, but as a part of the State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during the period of doubt and dismay.
In the confident expectation that citizens of Maryland will consider the proposed publication of sufficient importance to induce them to purchase, the Subscriber is induced to propose the following terms.
The Price per Copy, not exceeding $2.00.
