

CLOTHES AND FEED THE POOR

Dr. Howe closes one of his forcible and athletic appeals to the American people in behalf of the Greeks as follows:—

"Greece expects aid of you—the last tasted your bounty and looks for a continuance of it, and I will venture to say, that those encamped on her sea shore, thousands of women and children are now watching every sail that comes from the West, and flattering themselves with the hope that it may be an American ship with provisions for them."

This suggestion has given birth to the following beautiful poetical effusion, which first appeared in the Connecticut Courant.

On the steep coast they stand
And watch the tossing sea,
For the banner of our glorious land,
The land of liberty.

Whom on the misty deep,
Like a dim speck it seems,
They trace its clustering stars, and weep,
And bless their pitying beams.

Why through those shadow'd ones
With wild and eager tread,
Where are you mother's stately sons,
Her sons are with the dead.

The naked, orphan train,
Whom saint and famine pale,
Who rest they near the sounding main,
They watch our country's sail.

Why gaze ye on the land
Which France's desert soil,
Gaze! France's desert soil,
Which dealt the broken bread?

From Sparta's crest is low—
Behold! Athens in the dust,
And o'er their homes the Moslem foe
Falls in profane lust.

That time which show her role
Of classic light and all,
Whose heroic deeds beguile the globe
To a high festival.

Real and gemmed needs,
Awake our Father's land!
And while her struggling bosom bleeds,
Extend her healing hand.

EXTRAORDINARY POLICE CASE.
GUTHRIE, LONDON—WEAVER, WEAVER.

This was a proceeding instituted by Mrs. Mary Weaver, of Poplar Court, Foot street, against her husband, charging him, that he, totally forgetting his plighted troth to love, honor, and cherish her, had wickedly beat, battered, and bruised her, and finally ejected her from bed, and board, and house, without making any provision for her maintenance elsewhere.

To which charge, Mr. Weaver replied that he did not forget to cherish until she forgot to obey; and thereupon, as the lawyers say, issue was joined. But, before going into arguments, it may be as well to state that Mr. Weaver is an impecunious manufacturer of beef, mutton, and pork; vulgar, a journeyman butcher, with green, yellow, and black eyes, and an ugly abrasion of the integument on the ridge of his nose, that his wife, Mary, is a slight "cented figure," ringletted and Leghorn'd a la mode de Londres; that she and Mr. Weaver married for love alone; that they have been united five weary years; and that their union has been as unproductive as any increase to the population as the severest Malthusian could possibly require.

When their case was called on, Mr. and Mrs. Weaver approached the table side by side; and Mrs. Weaver, having snatched her long and glossy ringlets, proceeded to address the Bench on the subject of her matrimonial miseries; her husband accompanying that address with a kind of running commentary in a deep under growl: "This is my husband, Sir," began Mrs. Weaver. "The more the pity," continued Mr. Weaver; and so they went on in form and manner following. She: Last Saturday night, when I came home, "My dear," said I, "you must turn out." "What for?" says I. "Nothing," says he; "many a man has been banged for nothing, and surely I may serve as a reason for turning out a bad wife!" He: Very good, I did say so. She: But it was after ten o'clock, and it rained so hard that I could not go that night else I would have gone to my sister's at St. Christopher Hawkin's away from such a brute. He: Very good. She: And so it passed off, your Worship, and we had our supper, and went to bed; but next morning at four o'clock, he gets up and begins splashing water about the room, at such a rate, that I should have been drowned if I had not jumped out of bed. He: Very good; there was but half a pint of water in the room! Please to take a note of that, your Worship. "She: I ran out of the room, your worship, and he locked the door and went to bed again so that I was obliged to sit up on the cold stairs till big Lordship had breakfasted and gone out. He: Very good; and you-kneek'd imp-shins as I went past you. She: And it would have been serving you right, Weaver, if I'd broke your neck down stairs!—He: Very good. She: I waited dinner for him till after three o'clock that afternoon. He: And the mutton wasn't half done then. She: It's false, Weaver! it was quite thoroughly done; but, because I had order'd only a pint of porter instead of a pot, he sharpen'd his knife upon his steel, your worship, and swore he'd cut the cat's head off! He: I deny that; the cat did no harm to me, and the cat could not have ordered a pot of porter if she had been told as often as I told you. She: I scorn your words, Weaver. He: very good.

She: the cat ran away, your Worship, and then he sharpened his knife again, and swore he'd cut my head off! He: please to take a note that I deny that your Worship. She: Why, Weaver, you know you did not, and what's the use of denying it? He said, your Worship, that he had been matched in matrimony long enough, and that he would put an end to it, and try how he liked a hanging match instead. He: Very good and none the worse for the change, I dare say. She: And what's more, we had a spaniel puppy once, and he killed that, and threw it out of the window! He: very good, but I didn't kill you, you know. She: Not because, when you couldn't catch the poor cat, it all passed off; but when we sat down to tea, your Worship, he jumped up and throw'd three buckets full of water all about the room, and then went to bed by himself. He: Very good, but why don't you tell about the gin and water? She: Oh! I'll soon tell all about that. After he was gone to bed, your Worship, I went out to go to my sister, at Sir Christopher Hawkin's; and as I was going along I met a dozen butchers. He: Only one. She: Weaver, I scorn your insinuations. There was at least a dozen of 'em, your Worship, and friends of Weaver's; and they said to me, well, Mrs. Weaver, are you and your husband come to any temperance yet? Of course I told 'em the truth, that we was as far off amicable as ever; with which they very politely asked me into the Barley Mow, to take a glass of warm gin and water; when, just in the middle of it, in comes my husband, and beats me to such a degree, that I am all over bruises from head to foot. He: Very good; show some of 'em, She: Oh! I can easily do that, (stripping up her sleeve, and showing two or three green and yellow spots on the under part of her fore arm.) He: Stop, let's see? (Taking hold of the arm, and quietly spitting upon the spots, he very deliberately began rubbing at them with the cuff of his coat, then by seeming to signify, that in his opinion, the said spots were not bruises, but paint laid on for the nonce; while she sedulously endeavoured to withdraw her arm from the indelicate test.

"What are you about man! free her arm—do you hear?" cried Mr. Alderman Thompson, before whom the case was heard, and who could scarcely help laughing at the earnestness with which the said valiant had been applied to. "Very good, your worship," said Mr. Weaver, relinquishing the arm and the operation together; "but if you'd have let me alone, you'd have seen that instead of bruises, it's nothing in the world but mustard and powder blue rubbed hard on."

"I scorn your words, Weaver," cried Mrs. Weaver, and, then turning to the Alderman, she went on—"Besides, he set the house on fire once your Worship."

"Very good," responded Mr. Weaver; "please to take a note of that, your Worship; and a query why I wasn't banged for it?"

"O! I made it up with every body, or else you would have been banged; you know that, Weaver," rejoined his spouse; and she then went on to state, that after having beat her in the presence of the twelve butchers in the Barley Mow, he had discarded her altogether, sold off all his furniture, and positively refused to contribute any thing towards her support.

"You must maintain her," said the Alderman.

"Very good, your Worship, I can't," replied Mr. Weaver. "I only carried furniture yesterday; she's run me in debt every where; and instead of my having sold off my furniture, it's been seized for rent by the landlord, and here's the papers to show for it. I'm no shake bag, your worship, but a free citizen of London, and my grandfather was a Churchwarden of St. Sepulchre, and—"

"That's no reason why you should beat me, if you'd a King for your grandfather," observed Mrs. Weaver; "and your Worship, he never gets up before 12 o'clock, and has his breakfast and his pipe in bed! Weaver you are a very bad man."

"Very good," quietly responded Mr. Weaver; and after much recapitulatory discussion, he was ordered to find bail to keep the peace.

Interesting to Manufacturers and Capitalists.
Sale of the Cape Sable Alum and Copperas Works.

By virtue of a Decree of the High Court of Chancery of Maryland, the subscribers, as Trustees, will offer for sale at public auction, on MONDAY the 30th day of June next, at 12 o'clock, at the Cape Sable Works, all the LANDS, WORKS, APPARATUS, and PERSONAL PROPERTY, with the rights of MINES and MINERALS, of the CAPE SABLE COMPANY. These lands consist of the following tracts and part of tracts, containing 1010 ACRES—namely, Cape Sable—Ogden's—Marshall's—Hunting Ground—Hall's Parcel—Grove's—Dodge's—Barren Hills—Edge Hills—Gray's Range—Mossy Addition—Mountain of Wales—Reservoir of the Mountain of Wales—Hall's Lot Enlarged. The Land and the Works are on Mosgothy River, a broad navigable stream emptying into the Chesapeake Bay, from which the property is but a few miles distant, being about 15 miles from Baltimore, and about 5 miles from Annapolis.

The ALUM ORE is of the first quality and inexhaustible quantity upon the land, and readily procured. It takes the spontaneous when dug and is so rich of salts when calcined that, as stated, each pound of stone will yield a pound of salts if calcined to be saturated. It is believed that the works are capable of affording a supply of alum from the ore of this tract sufficient for the whole of the United States, and at a very inconsiderable expense. The product of copperas is stated to be large. The Company also owns the right of mines and minerals or digging for ore in lands adjoining those above described to the extent of about 870 acres, in the following among other tracts—Sturton's, Rev. J. and Phoebe's Park, Mountain of Wales, Hill's Parcel, "Stockhold."

It is estimated that more than two thirds of the Company's lands is in wood, consisting of oak, hickory, chestnut and pine. Of the latter a large portion is of that estimable timber called White Pine, so highly valued for the deck of ships. The works of Cape Sable consist of THREE EXTENSIVE STONE LABORATORIES, each with four lead boilers and one copper boiler, chymistries, and steam engine, a large stone boiler, and apparatus for evaporating, and every convenience deemed necessary to carry on the works on a large scale, together with DWELLING HOUSES for the managers and labourers. The works are in operation, and will continue so until the day of sale, and may be viewed at any time upon application to Mr. Lechleitner, at the works, Richard Caton, Esq. Baltimore, or J. Sped. Esq. Annapolis.

THE PERSONAL PROPERTY to be sold consists of four Slaves for life—besides Horses, Mules, Asses and Oxen—arts, Wagons, Ploughs and Harrows, Blacksmith's Tools, &c. and various implements used in the manufacture and for farming. There is also to be sold a quantity of Pyrites estimated at more than one thousand tons, and several thousand tons of Ashes which have been incinerated and would now yield, it is believed, on a second fixation, five to ten per cent of salts.

The terms of sale are that five thousand dollars of the purchase money shall be paid in the ratification of the sale by the Chancellor, with interest from the day of sale; and the residue of the purchase money in equal annual payments in 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 years with interest from the day of sale.

In pursuance of the Decree, the Creditors of the Cape Sable Company are hereby notified to exhibit their claims with the vouchers therefor to the Chancery Office, within six months from the said day of sale.

Those inclined to purchase are requested to examine the premises previously to the day of sale. The title papers may be seen on application to Samuel Moale, at his office in West Fayette street

PROPOSAL FOR PRINTING
The Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland,
Held in the City of Annapolis, in the years 1774, 1775 and 1776.

IF Sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, '75 and '76. It is believed that there are not more than two copies of these Journals now extant; and from the circumstance that they were printed in pamphlet form, and unbound, it may be fairly concluded that they, too, must in a few years be destroyed by the mere decay of time. These Journals are the only authentic evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. Although we have, in abundance, histories of Maryland, as connected with the association of Provinces and Colonies; at that time formed, for mutual protection against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these works embrace what may be termed its Domestic and Internal Political History.

This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to hand down to posterity, not only on account of its deep interest, but as a public State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during this period of doubt and dismay.

In the confident expectation that the citizens of Maryland will consider the proposed publication of sufficient importance to entitle it to their patronage, the Subscriber is induced to issue these proposals.

The Price per Copy, not exceeding $2.00.

DECISIONS OF THE COURT OF APPEALS OF MARYLAND,
PUBLISHED By Subscription.

THE DECISIONS OF THE COURT OF APPEALS OF MARYLAND,
To be Reported by Thomas Harris, Esquire, Clerk of the Court of Appeals, and Reverdy Johnson, Esquire, Attorney at Law.

These Decisions will form a continuation of the first volume of Reports already published by Messrs Harris and Johnson, which closes with the year 1805. It is proposed to publish the Decisions in a Series of Numbers, each to contain not less than one hundred and twenty five pages, and for numbers to constitute a volume. The last number of each volume will contain a full and complete Index. The mode of publication, it is conceived, possesses advantages which give it a decided preference to that of publishing the Reports in bulky volumes. It ensures the earlier publication of the Reports, and as not more than two numbers will be published in a year, the expense will not be so sensibly felt.

TERMS
The price of each number of the Reports will be $1 25, payable on delivery.

Subscriptions to the above work are received at GEO SHAW'S Store, the Maryland Gazette Office, and the respective Offices of the County Clerks of this State.

MAJOR EGERTON.

The shadows, so dark—Macbeth, the critic's first and last injunction to the author and the artist is, to copy. For my own part, I never had half believed in this standard rule of common-place criticism, and beautiful nature too, may very natural, that if too accurate, it will seem unnatural.

It is a most paradoxical assertion, and is quite worthy of a metaphysician. Still it is probable. Who has not observed that which is true is not always so? Who has not seen a brilliancy of wit, or some singular effect of fancy, which, if faithfully transferred to canvas, would be pronounced by ninety nine out of a hundred to be an extravagant and fantastic appreciation of the art? So too, in life—occurrences happen every where, which if related in a drama, or interwoven in a drama, are branded by the whole criticism as too far out of probability to be tolerated, even in profession.

When Fennel and I were crowded of the stage box.
