

SOUTHERN EXPEDITION.

We copy, with much pleasure, from the National Intelligencer of Saturday last, the following article on the subject of the intended National Expedition to the South Sea and Pacific Ocean: We understand that orders have been issued from the Navy Department, to the commanding officer of the West India Squadron, for the immediate return of the sloop of war Hornet, to the Navy Yard at New York, to undergo the necessary repairs, to fit her for the expedition to the South Sea and Pacific Ocean. The Hornet is the smallest sloop of war, we believe, in the service, and may, by removing her heavy armament, and by some other alterations, be made a good discovery ship. We learn that several Naval Officers, on distant stations, have been sent for to join the enterprise. We have not heard who will be the senior officer, but understand the appointment will soon be made. We learn, also, that it is in contemplation to send one, or perhaps two, small merchant brigs in company with the Hornet. These small vessels will be of essential service to the enterprise, and may greatly extend its usefulness. We do not know, however, that these brigs will be procured by the Navy Department, but they will act entirely under its control. The provision made by Congress for the expedition was not as ample as was desired by its projectors, but it was all that could be obtained amid the hurry of the close of the session. The bill reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs was not acted on for want of time; and the Resolutions introduced by Mr. R. of Massachusetts, we believe, originated with, and were accepted by the friends of the enterprise, including the Naval Committee, as a substitute for the bill.

What can be done within the powers delegated by the Resolutions, and without prejudice to the general interest of the Naval service, towards accomplishing the object in view, the Department seems disposed promptly to do. We have great interest in the Pacific Ocean, and it is daily increasing. Numerous Islands, some of them inhabited, require further and more accurate surveys, to render our operations in the whole fishery less hazardous to the lives and property of our merchants and mariners.

Discoveries, of the highest importance to commerce and science, may yet be made in the great expanse of the Pacific Ocean, and within comparatively low latitudes, while in the high Southern latitudes scarcely any thing is known. The advances made by Captain Cook were, we believe, to 67° 50' and 71° 10', which still left about 54° of longitude, in which the Southern circle was never approached. To these we may now add that of Captain Weddell, who, in 1824, reached 74° 25' South, and put back with an open sea before him all else of that region is still unknown.

Whatever of good may result to the country from this expedition, justice requires that it be attributed mainly to the exertions of Mr. Reynolds, whose persevering efforts throughout the nation to unite public sentiment in its favor, ultimately obtained for the enterprise the sanction of the National authority, and the aid of the National funds. We perceive, from the late intelligence from England, that the British government has just sent off two different exploring expeditions into the Southern seas; a fact which shows the commercial importance which that sagacious People attach to discoveries which they think possible in the vast unexplored regions of the Southern hemisphere.

PROPOSAL
FOR PRINTING
The Journals of the Convention of the Province of Maryland,
Held in the City of Annapolis, in the years 1774, 1775 and 1776.
IF Sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, 1775 & 1776. It is believed that there are more than two copies of these Journals extant; and from the circumstances that they were printed in paper, and unbound, it may be concluded that they, too, must have been destroyed by the mere lapse of time. These Journals are the authentic Evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. All we have, in abundance, history, Maryland, as connected with the Declaration of Provinces and Colonies, against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these works exist what may be termed its Domestic Internal Political History.
This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to preserve down to posterity, not only as a monument of its deep interests, but as a State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during that period of doubt and dismay.
In the confident expectation that the citizens of Maryland will consider proposed publication of sufficient importance to entitle it to their patronage, the Subscriber is induced to propose these proposals.
The Price per Copy, not exceeding 82 00.

GENEVIEVE.

The following affecting story is extracted from a work just published by the Librarian. Diary of an Ennui.

Genevieve de Sorbigny was the daughter of a noble family; young, beautiful, and a rich heiress, she seemed to command all this world could do for her happiness. When left an orphan, at an early age, instead of being sent to a convent, as was then the universal custom, she was brought up under the care of a maternal aunt, who devoted herself to her education, and doated on her with an almost exclusive affection.

Genevieve resided in the country with her aunt till she was about sixteen; she was then brought to Paris to be united to the marquis of ——— as a mere marriage de convenance, a family arrangement, entered into when she was quite a child according to the ancient regime; and unfortunately for Genevieve, her affianced bridegroom was neither a man nor amiable; yet more fortunately it happened, that the marquis's father, the Baron de Villary, who generally accompanied him in his visits to Paris, possessed all the qualities in which she was deficient, being handsome, and singularly handsome, "a noble" "spirited." While the marquis, with the good breeding of his time, was bowing and paying his devoirs to the aunt of his intended, the young Baron, with equal success, was capturing the heart of the niece.—Her extreme beauty had charmed him at the first glance, and her partiality, delicately and involuntarily betrayed, added every scruple, if he ever entertained any; and so in the usual course of things, they were soon irretrievably and epurdum in love with each other.

Genevieve, to much gentleness, mingled much firmness of character. The preparations for the marriage were on; but the moment she was aware of her own sentiments, she had courage enough to declare to her father, that rather than give her hand to the marquis whom she detested, she would throw herself into a nunnery, and endow it with her fortune; a very considerate resolution; as Emorde observed sarcastically, "The poor aunt was thrown by this unexpected declaration, into the utmost amazement and perplexity; she was to despair, such a thing had never been heard of or contemplated; but the marriage was broken off, and the Baron appeared publicly as the suitor of Genevieve. The marquis politely challenged his cousin, and owed his life to his forbearance, and the duel, and the cause of it, and the gallantry and generosity of De Villey rendered him irresistible in the eyes of all the women in Paris, while to the heart of Genevieve, he became dearer than ever.

To gain the favour of the aunt was now the only difficulty; she had ever regarded him with ill-concealed aversion and suspicion. Some mystery hung over his character, there were certain reports whispered relative to his former life and conduct—which it was equally difficult to discredit and disprove. Besides, though of a distinguished character, he was poor; and his father was most notoriously a mauvais sujet. A reluctant consent was at last wrung from her aunt; and Genevieve was united to her father.

The chateau of the Baron was situated in one of the wildest districts of the wild and desolate coast of Bretagne. The people who inhabited the country round, were a ferocious, half civilized race, and in general desperate smugglers and pirates.—They had carried on for nearly half a century a constant and systematic warfare, against the legal authorities of the province. No revenue officer was exempt dare set his foot within a certain district. Such was their desperate courage, the incredible celerity
