These few words have perhaps done more mischief in the world than can be conceived. Youths, just entering the threshold of life with the bright anticipation of their friends, allured by the syren Pleasure with the arckling cure in her friends, allured by the syren Plea-sure; with the sparkling cup in her hand although sensible of the dark abyss yawning at her feet too often stifle the disagreeable motion of con-science and friends, with this sophistical and false consolation, "I can quit when I choose," Alas! link by link in the chain forging, which soon to bind such unfortunate youths. and hid defiance to the noblest reso lutions. Too true was the assertion of Lord Bacon that all the crimes on the earth do not destroy so many of the human race, nor alienate so much property, as drunkenness. It expels reason, drowns memory—is the beggar's companion, and the true and only cause of the vast increase of the crime in the world. There is certainly no character which appears so despicable as that of a drunkard; he displays every little spot in his soul in its utmost deformity. When ence the youth becomes a devotee at the shrine of Bacchus, and fond of his libations, it is time to think. Let him not lull his conscience with the delusive idea of quitting when he from that moment to cease indulging in his cup and shun those cemeteries of morality & reputation with which our country unhappily abounds. Drunkenness, that fell destroyer of mind and morals, has enlisted the exhortation of the preacher—the pen of the moralist-the warning of the physician-the pleadings of the wife and children with tears in their eyes -the remonstrances of the parent nd the vawning of the grave-but all will not do. It has reached an awful and alarming height—it daily increases. It is known to require an extraordinary act oble firmness or the heart of coast its blandishments and allocations. It is then the and allurements. It is then the temptation you are so easily to withstand, and the habit you are to "quit when you choose?" Ah! no-my dear young friends, hearken to my dvice; when the seductive goblet is offered to our lips, think not you will once more sip the liquid paison because you can quit when you choose, but consider that cup may probably be the one that will establish that habit with you which you will never be able thereafter to conquer, and dash the proffered cup with indignation to the ground.
