Frigate Constitution commonly called "Old Iro die."

On the 4th instant this favourite and following the came up and anchored off the Navy Yard. When off India-wharf, she fired a national salute in honour of the day. The return of this noble frigate to the place of her nativity, and on the 4th of July too, may be reckoned among the instances of yould luck that has always attended her. She was launched from Hards shipyard at the north end, in October 1797, and is consequently nearly thirty-one years old. The severe labour that attended her birth, which was only effected at the third trial, was seized upon by the enemies of a navy as prophetic of ill luck! With how little reason, her brilliant career has fully demonstrated. We may safely challenge the annals of navial history, to name the ship that has done so much to fill the measure of her countered.

From the Arkansas Gaz. of June 11th. Serious disturbance with the Indians.

We are sorry to learn, by several entlemen, from the Post of that a serious disturbance has recently arisen between some of the citizens of that place, and a party of Indians, who were encamped in that vicinity, which unfortunately resulted in the death of two of the Choctaws, who were of the party. The particulars, as related to us, are briefly these.
