MESSAGES.

affirms me pleasure to render my friendly greetings to you on the occasion of your assembling at the National Convention, to discuss the important duties which you have been called by the voice of your countrymen. The task devolves on me, under a sense of the constitution, to present to you, as the national legislature of twenty four sovereign States, twelve millions of happy people, a new series of laws and proposals, such measures as, in the discharge of my official functions, have suggested themselves as necessary to promote the objects of our Union.

In communicating with you for the first time, it is, in a source of unfeigned satisfaction, calling for your gratulation and devout thanks to a bright providence, that we are at peace with all mankind, and that our country exhibits the most cheering evidence of general welfare and progress. I improve this opportunity to express my warmest wishes for the success of your labors, and to assure you of the affectionate regards of your friends and associates in the various branches of the government, and by the intelligence and patriotism of the people, we shall be able, under the protection of Providence, to cause all our rights to be respected.

Our foreign relations, although in their general character pacific and friendly, present subjects of difference between us and other powers, of deep interest, as well as of importance to the welfare of our country. To effect an adjustment of these shall continue to be the object of my earnest endeavours, notwithstanding the difficulties of the task, I do not allow myself to apprehend unfavorable results. I am, however, sensible that the national strength, and the welfare of our people, are fully adequate to the maintenance of all her interests. In discharging the responsible trust confided to the Executive in this respect, it is my settled purpose to ask nothing but the aid of a just and patriotic people, which I trust will be readily afforded. I shall, therefore, in my official capacity, be supported by the various branches of the government, and by the intelligence and patriotism of the people, we shall be able, under the protection of Providence, to cause all our rights to be respected.

Under the Convention for regulating the reference to arbitration of the disputed points of boundary between the United States and Great Britain, the proceedings have hitherto been conducted in that spirit of candour and liberality which ever led to clearance of the acts of sovereign States, seeking to adjust the most important questions of international law, and to preserve the most cordial relations, such are my own views, and it is not to be doubted that such are also the prevailing sentiments of our intelligent and patriotic citizens. It has been afforded for a full development of the policy which the present cabinet of Great Britain declare to pursue towards this country. I indulge the hope that it will be of a just and pacific character, and that our friendly relations will be speedily and acceptably adjusted to our mutual interests.
