

From the United States Gazette: MIDNIGHT. I love to muse by the river beach, When the stars are shimmering o'er me, When the breaking wave doth a moral teach, As it flashes in light before me. The air is like a timeless sea Of pure and silvery light, And the waters glaze transparently, Illumined by the queen of night. The crested waves as they dash on high, And dissolve in pearls of foam, Appear as a carpet spread gaudily, Where the giant sea-god treads. The stars that glared up so peacefully, Seem silent in the river's bed, And their fallen leaves of the poplar tree Make music o'er my head. On such a night did the Indian woo, And win his dainty bride, As such, did he vow to be ever true, As they sat by this river's side. She looked up at the starry sky, As he told his flattering tale, Her dark eyes sparkling brilliantly, When seen by the moon-beams pale. He pointed to the evening star— 'Tis reflected at my feet— And told her of a home afar, Where faithful lovers meet. He told her, when this life was o'er, That they'd visit that shining isle, And sit upon that golden shore, Where he'd revel in her smile. But list to that thrilling note! 'Tis the lover's serenade; And his heart beats quick, that his lay may float To his own loved blue-eyed maid. And she is sleeping sweetly now— Her eye-lids dimly fringed, While a shade like thought is on her brow, And her cheek is slightly tinged. She's dreaming of her own true love, By the smile upon her lips; She dreams of a fount like that above, Where their love was first sipped. 'Tis the fount of love, as pure and deep As the faith to spirits given; 'Tis blissful, for this mortal sleep, 'Tis the bliss of heaven. But the winds are rising in their might, And the clouds stalk blackly on— I know there'll be a storm to-night, For the sky's pure blue has gone. And for an end I must take of my reverie, And hie to my lonely bed; For I hear the tempest demon's cry, As it echoes o'er my head.

THE STORY OF FATHER NICHOLAS.

BY M'KENZIE. Real precepts and hypothetical cautions are indeed frequently offered to youth and experience, in a manner so ungracious as neither to command their attention, nor conciliate their liking. He who says I am to instruct and to warn, with a face of instruction or admonition, prepares his audience for hearing that the young and the lively always avoid as tiresome, or fear as unpleasant. A more willing and a deeper impression will be made when the observation arises without being prompted, when the understanding is addressed through the feelings. It was this which struck me so forcibly in the story of Father Nicholas—I never felt so strongly the evils of dissipation, nor ever was so ashamed of the shame of being virtuous. It was a small town in Brittany, in which there was a Convent of Benedictines, where particular circumstances had induced me to take up my residence for a few weeks. They had some pictures which strangers used to visit—I went with a party whose purpose was to look at them—mine in such places is rather to look at men. If in the world we behold the shifting scene which prompts observation, we see in such secluded societies a sort of still life, which nourishes thought, which gives subject for meditation. I confess, however, I have often been disappointed; I have seen a group of faces under their cowls, on which speculation could build nothing; mere common place countenances, which might have equally well belonged to a corporation of Bakers or Butchers. Most of those in the Convent I now visited were of that kind: one however was of a very superior order; that of a Monk, who knelt at a distance from the Altar, near a Gothic window, through the painted panes of which a gleamy light touched his forehead, and threw a dark RIMBRANDT shade on the hollow of a large black, melancholy eye. It was impossible not to take notice of him. He looked up, involuntarily no doubt, to a picture of our Saviour bearing his cross; the similarity of the attitude, and the quiet resignation of the two countenances, formed a resemblance that could not but strike every one. 'Tis Father Nicholas, whispered our conductor, who is of all the brotherhood the most rigid, the most austere, and the kindest to other men. As the distressed, and the sick, and the dying he is always ready to administer consolation. No body ever told his misfortune in which he did not take an interest, or request a good office

JOURNAL OF HEALTH.

CONDUCTED BY AN ASSOCIATION OF PRACTITIONERS. Health is the poor man's riches, the rich man's bliss.

The primary object with the conductors of the Journal of Health, is to point out the means of preserving health and preventing disease. To attain this all classes and both sexes shall be addressed, in a style familiar and friendly, and with an avoidance of such professional terms and allusions as would in any way obscure the subject or alarm the most fastidious. The fruits of much reading, study, and careful observation, shall be placed before them, so arranged and applied as to conduce most efficaciously to their bodily comfort and mental tranquility. To whatever profession or calling they may belong, the readers of this Journal will find precepts susceptible of valuable application. Air, food, exercise, the reciprocal operation of mind and body, climate and localities, clothing and the physical education of children, are topics of permanent and pervading interest, with the discussion and elucidation of which the pages of the work will be mainly filled.

Recommendation of the work.

We approve of the plan on which the publication, entitled the Journal of Health, is conducted, and believe that it is calculated to be useful by enlightening public opinion on a subject of high importance to the welfare of society. The numbers which have appeared, evince talent, and may be viewed as a pledge of the education of children, are topics of permanent and pervading interest, with the discussion and elucidation of which the pages of the work will be mainly filled.

2 BUSHROD W. MARRIOTT, Clk.

IN CHANCERY,

18th November, 1829.

Thomas Ayres vs Isaac Whitaker, & others.

THE bill in this case, states that a John Skiventon, deceased, was indebted to the complainant, that after said Skiventon's death complainant obtained judgment for said debt against the defendant, Isaac Whitaker, the executor of said Skiventon; that the personal estate of said Skiventon had been wasted by Whitaker; that he and his securities were insolvent; that Skiventon devised his real estate to said Whitaker for life, and to his children in fee; that said Whitaker had fraudulently conveyed said land away. The bill prays a sale of said land for the payment of said debt, and prays general relief. It is stated, in a petition filed in said cause for the revival thereof, against certain representatives of certain of the original defendants, that James Whitaker, Jonathan Williams, and his child, whose name is unknown, James Whitaker, of Jno. Mathew Gary, and Siltha his wife, and James Wood and Mary his wife, several of the said representatives defendants, and original defendants, live beyond the limits of the state of Maryland, whereupon, it is on this 18th day of November, by Theodorick Bland, chancellor, ordered, That the complainant, by causing a copy of this order, and the substance of said bill; to be published once a week for three successive weeks, before the 19th day of December next, in some one of the newspapers published in the city of Annapolis, give notice to said absent defendants to appear in this court on or before the 17th day of April next, in person, or by solicitor, and answer said bill True copy.
