There are few subjects of a general character, requiring legislative enactments, and those of a local or private nature, will, it is presumed, be presented as soon as public intimation is given of the day of adjournment. There are many good reasons in favour of the adoption of this measure, at the present time, but on which its sure, at the present time, but on which it is deemed unnecessary to enlarge. It may not however, be improper to mention, that, should the two Houses adopt the recommendation of the two Houses adopt the recommendation of the committee, a saving to the Treasury of sixteen thousand five hundred dollars will be effected, as has been ascertained by the ac-companying reply of the Treasurer, to an in-quiry addressed to him, on this point. The Legislature will deem this no unworthy consideration, when, from the unprofitableness of nearly every species of industry, it is known that the people could so ill bear any addition to their burdens. The committee would also take the liberty of suggesting the expediency of establishing so molesome a precedent, among the effects of mich, would be an early presentation of furtifiers with its concerning. ly presentation of finsiness, with its conse-quent deliberation, a great and necessary economy of the public treasure, and a wise diminution in the mass of legislation.
