DR. HULL'S TRUSS ROR the relief and cure of Hernis or Rup-ture. This Surgical instrument is now so well known to the Medical profession, and so well known to the Bredical programon, and an extensivity used by unfortunate sufferers labourging under the disease of Agentia, that a particular account of its mechanical contained of its surgical effects in the drift unnecessary.—
The subjoined remarks from Physicians and Surgeons of high respectability in our county, are the results of much practical experience in the use and application of this truss.

James Thatcher, M. D. author of the Modern Practice, in his second edition, under the James Phatther, M. D. author of the Modern Practice, in his second edition, under the subject of Hernia, remarks "Dr. Hull is exclusively entitled to the credit of first adapting the true Surgical principle for the radical cure of Hernia. He happily conceived the idea that the pad of the Truss should be so constructed as simply to support the inuscular fibres around the true range to the pad of the Truss should be so constructed. the ring or aperture as much as possible, in the state in which they are maintained in perfect health. Unless this be attained the parts car never recover their natural tone, whatever may be the degree of pressure applied. " Samuel Ackerly, M. D. in his excellent e dition of 'Hooper's Medical Dictionary,' under the head of 'Truss,' after enumerating the exisresulting from the use of the defective trusses formerly worn, says. This coul was not ful-ly remedied until Dr. Amos G. Hull, of New York, turned his attention to the subject, and by his improvement in the construction of trus-ses, has rendered it certain that all recent ruptures and those of children, may be permanen ly cured, and those of old people standing, may, in many cases, also be reme died. The p.d of Dr. Hull's Truss is concave and not conv. x: and hence the raised circular margin, by proper adaptation, presses upon to-sides of the hermal opening, and tends to close the aperture and cure the hermia. M. L. Knapp, M. D. late Physician and Surgeon to the Baltimore General Dispensary, in a communication to Doctor Hull, says: 41 have applied your trusses in several hundred cases during the last three years. A great many upon whom I have applied your trusses have been radically cured; and some of these were cases of long standing, where all other trusses backfailed. I send you a note of thanks thirty five years standing, by wearing one of your trusses for two years. He had worn o ther trusses twenty nine years. His son, also nged 16 years, ruptured from his infancy, was cared under my care in less than two years.— A case of scrotal rupture, of twenty years standing, in a labouring man forty years old, on whom I applied one of your trusses, the day af ter the injury, was cured in three months .geon the full powers and excellence of these instruments. Your trusses are exclusively preferred by the Professors in both of the Medical Schools in this city, and the Faculty in gen-

There has recently been published in Lon-don. a Romance, in three volumes, called "Oldcourt." It is a tale of more than half a entury past. From this novel we make a sewhich, while it exhibits the writer's powers, pictures forth in glowing colours, one of those Duels which, somewhere about the middle of the last century, were occasionally fought among the gentry of Ireland.

AN IRISH DUEL-OF THE OLD SCHOOL. They fought on the Curragh of Kildare, in the presence of five hundred spectators. * * *
'It was a glorious morning in September;

the sun shining strong, but the air rather cold. Bateman, who was the first man that ever put a pistol into my hand, asked me to go with him to the ground, merely, as he said, that I might see the sport. "They were old stagers, prime shots, and came to the back-bone. Of the two, however, Kilgobbin was the most famed for the pistol; and had never gone out, without knocking down, or at least winging his man. They well knew each other's powers, and that made them less disposed to an accommodation, which might be attributed to wrong motives.

Besides, from the nature of the quarrel, as it was taken up by the appellant, it could not but have a serious result to one, or both of The Knight was a rough rather coarse, ruddy complexioned man, about forty, with a scar under his eye, which he got in a scuffle with a cavalry officer, in the pump-room at Bath. Beau Bateman, as he was called, from his peculiar style of dress, was a tall, hand-some fellow, evidently younger than his anta. gonist, full of gaiety and good humour, and remarkable for that propensity to joke, which is so much the characteristic of our country. I eagerly observed his countenance when we met in the morning, but all was calm and steady; his eagle eye as bright and brisk as ever; he was even more talkative & jocular than usual. He had been particularly attentive to his dress, which was always in the ex-treme of the fashion; and, in short, he manifested in his whole demeanor such a perfect sang froid, that had it not been for a slight tremor of the upperlip, when turning aside to me, he told me, in case of accident, to give his pistols to his nephew—a chum of mine in college (who, by-the-by, was afterwards the first man I wounded with these very pistols;) had it not been, I say, for this slight tremor, and a pressure of the hand with which he accompanied his directions, nobody would have supposed that he was about to present himself sang froid, that had it not been for a slight supposed that he was about to present himself as a target to the best shot in Ireland.

On arriving at the ground, we saw the knight and his party in conversation, and a number of persons scattered about at a dis-

'Bateman, politely lifting his hat, said, 'Good morning, gentlemen, I hope we have not kept you waiting.' French answered, 'By no means, we were before our time.'—Kilgob-bin, in a rather ungracious way, replied to his adversary's calletten for a recommendation of the said of the sa adversary's salutation, Sir, your most obedi-ent. The others shook him cordially by the hand, for his jocular manners had made him a general favourite. The seconds were now about to measure the distance—nine paces, when Kilgobbin re-marked, that we were in the view of some ca-hins on the right. This seemed an odd objection, as there was no interruption to be appre-hended from such a quarter, and many of their inhabitants were collecting round to see the sport. He suggested, however, that we the sport. He suggested, however, that we should remove about a quarter of a mile further, to a fine-level turf, on the banks of a prod called Brown's hole, from the name of a lool who thought fit to jump in.

'As we proceeded, I occasionally observed the knight's countenance, and I thought's he appeared to beffushed, eager, and somewhat restless; looking round frequently withan unquiet eye, and paying only a sort of yawning attention to whatewas sale to him.

'All this time, I betefing his lockes, and somewhat results as every tracking his lockes, and somewhat it is the sale to him.
