DR. HULL'S TRUSS,

FOR the relief and cure of Hernia or Rupture. This Surgical instrument is now so well known to the Medical profession, and so extensivly used by unfortunate sufferers labourextensivly used by unfortunate unferers laboured ing under the disease of Hernia, that a particular account of its mechanical construction of its sugical effects is thought unnecessary.

The subjoined remarks from Physicians and Surgeons of high respectability in our country, are the results of much practical experience in the use and application of this truss.

James Thatcher, M. B. author of the Modern Practice, in his second edition, under the subject of Hernia, remarks "D". Hull is exclusively entitled to the credit of first adapting

UNITED STATES; TO BE PUBLISHED BY THE

AND TO BE EDITED DE THE REV. WM. R. WITTINGHAM, A. M. resent Editor of the Family V siter, and of the Child-en's Magazine of the General Protestant Episcopal Sanday School Union.

freeze Editor of the Tanily V urprand of the Child pale Magazine of the General Preferent Epiropal Sanday School Union.

The accond presentation of this design to the Episcopal public, is owing to no want of encouragement, or anticipation of difficulty in its accomplishment.

A considerable delay, in the execution of the former proposals, deemed necessary for the maturing of the original design, and for ascertaining exactly the nature of the wants which the publication is intended to supply, left the Trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Press, free to alter, and, if circumstances should warrant, to enlarge their plan. Communications from several quarters, and from the most respectable sources, produced by this delay, have led to the conviction, upon which the Trustees now propose to act, that a plan far more comprehensive than that first presented, is called for by our Church in this country. A mere republication of works of English and American divines was then contemplated. It is now intended, by the introduction of every thing necessary to adapt the works selected to the circumstances of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, to give the publication on the character of an original work, and, at the same time, to extend its design so far as to embrace the works of the primitive Christian writers, and if occasion present ligelf, of foreign divines.

By Mrs. Sigourney.

Death stood beneath a lordly dome,
As pittless and dread,
As when within the pressnit's home
He smites the unhonoured head.

"Haste! call the Queen!"—a feeble tone
In fear and anguish cried.—
Anishe who sat on England's throne—

Bent at the sufferer's side The dying countess strove in vain

Her Lat request to speak,

Till rease of woe, and dews of pain
Blent on her ashen checkAt length, her quivering hand unclosid,
And lot a ring was there,

of rare and radiant; one composid,
Such as a king might wear. "He for whose hand this ring was meet,

I dare not speak his name,
Bs of note isy it at your feet,
And share the scaffold's shame;
But i, and be my sin reveal'd And my repentance keen,

It in stern hate that pledge conceal'd,—
On! pardon, gracious Queen."

Oil partion, gracious Queen."
What did that jewell'd toy restore
Within the royal heart?
Did maidening love revive once more
In that convulsive start?

By who may scan her spirit's frame,
Y may fond pledge she view'd,
With the ridol bases came
It from his grave of ploof! Un from his grave of blood!

Us from his grave o' 2002;

Regret, confusion and remone,

He warring thoughts distrest;
And every heartstring's rebel force
Mide conflict in her breast;

Firece passions o'er her features spread,

She shook the Countession her bed,

Even at the latest grash.

Even at the latest gasp. Even at the latest gasp.
With Beshing eyes, and tottering knees,
She shricked in accents shril,
"Got any forgive you, if he please,
Be that I never will."

Who gave the great, the dread command, "Forgive!—and he forgiven."

FRANCIŠ RIORDAN.

(Wehave detached and condensed the following tale from the Rivals, which is remarka-ble for its highly wrought powers and super-normal development. Francis Riordan, who as entrusiastically attached to a young and lovely female, was compelled for political reasons to fiee his country. In foreign climes he rose to rank and consideration as a soldier, and returning at the end of four years, sought the residence of his adored Esther Wilderming. She had been induced, under a belief that Riordan had perished, to consent to wed his rival. Richard Liev,—but this consent, and grief for the loss of her lover, were too much for her slender frame, and Riordan arrived just in time to witness her funeral obsequies. After her interment he determines to rescue the beloved remains from the family tomb of his hated rival.] Balt. Gaz.

With the assistance of some friends, David had his old master conveyed to his brother's little dwalling in the handling had here. little dwelling in the neighbourhood. During that night, and nearly the whole of the followingday, Francis spoke not a word, and seemed to be scarcely conscious of what passed a-round him. He rejected all food, and delivered himself up to an extreme dejection of mind. Towards evening, however, he called Davy to his bedside and made him detail all he knew of the circumstances attending Esther's death, which the poor fellow, hoping to alleviate his master's affliction by awakening something like an interest in his mind, reca-pitalisted with great precision. The nurse, he said, had found her lifeless in her bed.— The Damers were in the utmost distress at bour this event, and Richard Lacy had conducted the his event, and Richard Lacy had conducted hisself, ever since, like a distracted person. Wille Francis listened to this portion of the sarrative, the speaker heard him ejaculate in a low whisper the words 'Poor fellow!'

That was what killed me!' said David, a few days afterwards in telling the circumstance to Mrs. Keleher, the moment I heard him showin' pity for Lacy, I knew his heart was broke! He never will hould up his headaxis, says I to myself, as long as ever he lives!

Night fell, lonely and dark, upon those dreary hills, and Francis had not begun to take an interest in any thing which passed around him. David's family were all in bed, and he sat about hy the fire-side, watching, lest some indeen illness should render his assistance mecessary to his master. He was just doring in his hay-bottomed chair, and remaining in his shoulders and a voice whisting his has allowed that his fancy construed into a limitent meaning? Wake, David, wake? I want you? said the voice!
