It has been stated officially, and stated ten, through the medium of the public page that during the four years of Mr. Adam's ministration, upwards of forty-five Milling of dollars of the national debt has been public vere this so, how was if paid? Who privided the means, who formed the system Was this the act of the Adams administration. No.—The means were provided by the Tressury, the money was raised from the people or indirect taxation, the system was formal long, long before Mr. Adams came into porter, and his administration were only the s gents to pay the amount appropriated by his towards the extinguishment of the public

An act was passed by congress on the M March 1817, entitled, "An act for the red demption of the public debt," which appropriated ten millions of Dollars annually for the purpose of gradually sinking or paying off the public debt of the nation; and be fourth section of this act provided, that was ever there should be any time after they 1817, a surplus of money in the treasury a ve the sums appropriated for the serviced such year, leaving also two millions of dellas in the treasury, such surplus was to be applied, by the commissioners of the sinking fad. to the purchase, or redemption of the puis

These, therefore were the funds provide congress! this was the act of congre experiment; which enabled the administra of James Monroe, under the guidance cable secretary of the treasury. Willia Crawford, to pay, on account of princial dinterest of the public debt, more than and interest of the public uses, this state one hundred millions of dollars; this state was found in full operation when John Quistin namer; and under the uspices of Andrew Jackson there is nower, y probability that all, or nearly all, of the ublic debt, both principal and interest, will be paid off by the year 1835, the time cake the upon by Mr. Crawford.

But it is not the fact, that forty-five milions of the public debt was "paid off" during the administration of Mr. Adams. Watter amount may have been paid, the det itself has only been reduced about twenty-fre illions of dollars (25,348,436 82) ts vi appear by a reference to the treasury reports of Mr. Rush in December 1825, and Decem ber 1828. Granting that this statement is correct, let it be remembered, that fits millions of dollars of this amount was borne paying interest due, is paying off a delta much less can it be said that paying off ca debt with money borrowed from another que-ter, is an admit with money porrowed from another there, is an actual payment; and hence the wide difference of almost twenty millions of lollars between the amount said to be "pail off" by the friends of Adams, and the amount said to be "pail".

But what has Jackson done? He has paid more of principal and interest of the public debt in the first year of his administration has Adams did in any one year. He has actual yearlied the late year and william at y reduced the debt nearly ten millions of Jollars, (9, 796, 238, 29,) and if permitted to 50 on in his own plain economical way, we shift on see a new and a pleasing spectacle presented to the view of an astonished and admiring world; ANATION WITHOUT DEBT. In the Philadelphia Sentinel of Saturday, we find the following account of the execution of Porter, the mail robber:— THE EXECUTION.

THE EXECUTION.

The sentence of the law was executed upon JAMES PORTER, the mail robber, at about a quarter before eleven o'clock yesterday morning.—It had been known to the public, for several days, that WILSON, one of the accomplices of Porter, had been pardoned of the capital offence by the President of the United States, in consequence as was stated, of some important information which he had communicated to the post office department.

and every measure has been taken by the Branch Bank Directors, by expresses and otherwise, to spread the news of this bold and extensive villainy.

Fuller is of respectable connexions—he has a wife and interesting family of children in discount in the capital offence of the day of the capital offence of the day of the service of the by the circumstances above detailed, when made known.' communicated to the post office department. The mass of the people however, unacquaint ed with the circumstances which led to a discrimination between the two convicts, and perceiving no difference in their moral or leperceiving no difference in their moral or legal guilt, were loud in the expression of their dissatisfaction. Hence many persons were apprehensive that the execution of Porter would be attended with riot, if not with blood must be attended with riot, if not with a will be attended with riot with

At about a quarter before ten o'clock, the prisoner left the prison in Arch street, in a cart, accompanied by the executioner, and escorted by the Marshal, with a detachment of the Marine corps, the constables of the city and county, the city watch, and a number of citizens who had been specially summoned by the Marshal. Arrived at the place of execution, the exercises of religion were performed by the Rev. Mr. Kemper of the Episcopal Church, the Rev. Mr. Force of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Mr. Ashton of the Baptist Church, were also in attendance.

At about half past ten, the clergymen took their leave of him, the Marshal proceeded to read the warrant for his execution, and after making the "necessary preparations, the unhappy culprit was launched into eternity.—At this moment, a general rush took place from the spot, by which miny persons were overturned, and many more greatly frighten ed. His struggle appeared to be but short.—We understand, that the body, after hanging for some time, was taken down, and conveyed to the public burial ground for interment.
