In the art of building Chimneys, and altering those already built, in such manner as to prevent or cure their smoking. From the time that chimneys were first introduced, the building them has been but a series of experiments. The best workmen have only succeeded, when accidentally approximating the principles, now first systematized and offered to the public. That this subject should have been involved in mystery till the present time, can only be attributed to the imperfect state of Chemical Science until within the last few years. The progress recently made in that science has enabled the subscriber to reduce the art of building chimneys to a system, invariably producing the desired result with respect to smoke, and at the same time making a saving of fuel.

DR. HULL'S TRUSS

FOR the relief of the Truss, Dr. Hull's Truss is well known to the Medical Profession, and is extensively used by unfortunate sufferers, being long under the disease of Hernia, and a particular advantage of its mechanical construction, and its surgical effects in thought, construction, and Surgeons of high respectability, in the use of the use and application of this Truss.

James Thatcher, M. D. author of the Modern Practice, in his second edition, under the subject of Hernia, remarks: 'Dr. Hull's Truss is exclusively entitled to the credit of first reducing the true Surgical principle for the radical cure of Hernia. He happily conceived the idea that the part of the Truss should be so constructed as simply to support the muscular fibres around the ring of aperture as much as possible, in the state in which they are maintained in perfect health. Unless this be attained the parts can never recover their natural tone, whatever may be the degree of pressure applied.'

Samuel Ackerly, M. D. in his excellent addition of Hooper's Medical Dictionary, under the head of 'Truss,' after enumerating the evils resulting from the use of the defective truss formerly worn, says: 'This evil was not fully remedied until Dr. Amos G. Hull, of New York, turned his attention to the subject, and by his improvement in the construction of trusses, has rendered it certain that all recent ruptures and those of old people, may be permanently cured, and those of old people and of long standing, may, in many cases, also be remedied. The pad of Dr. Hull's Truss is convex and not convex; and hence the raised circular margin, by proper adaptation, raises upon the sides of the hernial opening, and tends to close the aperture and cure the hernia.'

M. L. Knapp, M. D. late Physician and Surgeon to the Baltimore General Dispensary, in a communication to Doctor Hull, says: 'I have applied your trusses in several hundred cases during the last three years. A great many upon whom I have applied your trusses, have been radically cured; and some of these were cases of long standing, where all other trusses had failed. I send you a note of thanks from Mr. P., a citizen of great respectability, who was cured of a bad scrotal rupture, of thirty-five years standing, by wearing one of your trusses for two years. He had worn other trusses twenty-nine years. His son, also, aged 16 years, ruptured from his infancy, was cured under my care in less than two years.—A case of scrotal rupture, of twenty years standing, in a labouring man forty years old, was cured under my notice by one of your trusses in six months.—A case of groin rupture, from lifting, in a labouring man, thirty years old, on whom I applied one of your trusses, the day after the injury, was cured in three months.—Experience alone, can make known to the Surgeon the full powers and excellence of these instruments. Your trusses are exclusively preferred by the Professors in both of the Medical Schools in this city, and the Faculty in general.

Baltimore, January, 1830. Valentine Mott, M. D. Professor of Surgery, says: 'The great and signal benefits which are produced by this Truss, result from its strict observance to, and accordance with Scientific and Surgical principles. The operation and effect of this Truss is directly the reverse of all Trusses heretofore used; which being convex, tended to enlarge the dimensions of the rupture opening.' 'In my opinion that the union of Surgical design & mechanical structure in this instrument render it what has long been the desideratum of Practical Surgeons in Europe and America.'

Professor Mott also in lecturing upon Hernia, recommends Dr. Hull's Truss to the exclusion of all others. Apply at the office of Dr. KNAPP, 57 Fayette street, east of Monument Square, Baltimore. March 11 5M

SYMPTOMS OF OSSIFICATION.

BY T. MOORE.

All allusions to human suffering, that could be applied to a Bony part.—Life of Napoleon.

Time was I always had a drop for any tale or sight of sorrow, My heartkerchief I used to snuff, My heart was forced to borrow, I don't know how it is, but now My eyelids seldom want a drying, A doctor neibers could tell me how I fear my heart is ossifying!

Over Goshen how I used to weep, With tump cheeks, and nose of scarlet, Where W. W. put himself to sleep, At bedtimes wip'd and kiss'd by Charlotte! My number is an awful sum, For he there is in bullets flying, But now at that old tale I grin, I fear my heart is ossifying!

The drama once could strike and thrill My nerves, and set me tears a streaming, The Siddons then could turn at will Each pang upon the moan of feelings, At bedtimes now I smile, And laugh while Mrs. Haller's eyes ring, In short, 'tis such a change of style, I fear my heart is ossifying!

That part was such some years ago, To see a beggar quite would shock it, And in his hand I used to throw The quarter's savings of my pocket, I never wish, as I did then, To turn them all to gold—men— I fear my heart is ossifying!

We've had some serious thoughts of late, On sympathy to beg or borrow, New made drama, and tale of sorrow, And now a song and a tale of mirth, And kindly actors' last goodbyes ring, But hold! so little I have felt, I fear my heart is ossifying!

HENRY AND CAROLINE.

'My tale is simple and of humble birth, A tribute of respect to real worth.'

'You are too parsimonious Henry,' said Mr. D. to one of his clerks, as they were together in the counting house, one morning, 'give me leave to say that you do not dress sufficiently genteel to appear as a clerk in a fashionable store.' Henry's face was suffused with a deep blush, and in spite of his endeavours to suppress it, his teeth trembled on his manly cheek. 'Did I know that your salary was insufficient to procure the more genteel habiliments, continued Mr. D. I would increase it.'

My salary is sufficient, amply sufficient he replied Henry, in a voice choked with emotion, but with that proud independence of feeling which poverty had not been able to diminish. His employer noticed his agitation and immediately changed the conversation.

Mr. D. was a man of immense wealth, and ample benevolence, he was a widower and had but one child, a daughter, who was the pride of his declining years. She was not as beautiful as an angel or as perfect as Venus; but the goodness, the innocence, the intelligence of her mind shone in her countenance, and you had but to becomly acquainted with her, to love her. Such was Caroline DeLamire, when Henry first became an inmate of her father's house. No wonder then that he soon worshipped at her shrine—no wonder that he soon loved her with a deep and devoted affection—and reader, had you known him, you would not have wondered that the love was soon returned, for their souls were congenial, they were cast in virtue's pure mould; and although their tongues never gave utterance to what their hearts felt, yet the language of their eyes was too plain to be mistaken. Henry was the very soul of honour, and although he perceived with pleasure that he was not indifferent to Caroline, he still felt that he must conquer the passion that glowed in his bosom. 'I must not endeavor to win her young and artless heart,' thought he—'I am penniless and cannot expect that her father would ever consent to our union; he has ever treated me with kindness, and I will not be ungrateful! Thus he reasoned, and thus he heroically endeavoured to subdue what he considered an ill-fated passion.

Caroline had many suitors, and some who were fully worthy of her; but she refused all their overtures with a gentle yet decisive firmness. Her father wondered at her conduct, yet would not thwart her inclination.

He was in the decline of life, and wished to see her happily settled, ere he quitted the stage of existence. It was not long ere he perceived young Henry was the cause of her reluctance to other suitors; the evident pleasure she took in hearing him praised; the blush that overpread her cheeks when their eyes met, all served to convince the old gentleman, who had not forgotten that he was once young himself, that they felt more than a common interest in each other's welfare. He forbore making any remarks upon that subject, but was not displeas'd at the supposition, as the penniless Henry would have imagined.

Henry had now been about a year in his employ; Mr. DeLamire knew nothing of his family; but his strict integrity, his irreproachable morals; his pleasing manners, all conspired to make him esteem him highly. He was
