Mn. Editor, —I was one of a large con-gregation who listened, last Priday evening-to a discourse on TEMPERANCE, delivered in St. Anne's Church, by the Rev. Dr. WYATT, of Baltimore. I cannot refrain from expressing my very high gratification, in that most rloquent appeal, as well as my conviction of the great benefits which must result from such a mode of promoting such a cause. I believe no reflecting person could have gone away from the Church, without renewed resolutions to do what may lie in his power, to advance these common interests of society; and it is nown, that several individuals were gained to the cause, who, before, had hesitated in regard to the expediency of such associations— The Society has solicited a copy of the discourse for publication, and, when printed, it permanent auxiliary to the friends of Temper-ance through the union, who now number themselves to the amount of several hundreds of thousands. The well ascertained FACTS. on which the Temperance question now rests. ple, to induce them to concentrate their efforts to perpetuate and enhance the good that has already been done. We can scarcely look to any quarter of our common country, without discovering benefits that have been realized any quarter of our common country, without discovering benefits that have been realized And one can hardly propose to himself a nobler triumph, than he may enjoy, to reclaim by his example or influence, one single intemperate person. When I look on a drunkard, the words of the Saviour of Men strike me most impressively—"Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the Soul; but rather fear Him, who, after he hath killet is able to destroy both Body and Soul in Hell." In the many present penalties of his transgression, which the intemperate suffers, we see

In the many present penalties of his transgression, which the intemperate suffers, we see that the body is undergoing a killing more loathsome than any other which can be imagined—But when we look further, and reflect that these external indications are analy the evidence of the more horrible death bat is previage within, we may well fear, that its work will not be done, till it shall "destroy the soul in life." The Paris papers, which arrived this morning, contain a letter from the Archbishop of Paris, who had refused to administer the sacrament to the celebrated ex-Constitutional Bishop, Gregoire, except upon the condition of a recanstation of the particular opinions supposed to be entertained by Gregoire, who is now at the point of death. The Archbishop, half sfraid of the indignation of the French Ministry, by whose order a more liberal Bishop was sent to perform the sacred rite in question, and by whom arrangements have been made to receive the body in the Church after death, but unable to conquer the prejudices of education and habit, calls upon the clergy under his control tolenable him to reconcile the duties of his office and those required by his country, by uniting with him in entreating from the mercy of God one of those marks of grace (in favour, we presume, of the dying Constitutionalist) which touch, calm, and tranquilize.
