TO BAKERS.

The last files of English papers inform to that considerable interest is excited by the discovery made some months ago respective the baking of bread which promises is partial consequences. The process, for that a Mr. Hicks has obtained a patent is described as follows:—His oven is made of iron of a cylindrical form, so constructed as to be a cylindrical form. a cylindrical form, so constructed as tele hermetically sealed. The fuel is placed of a plate, which is kept revolving in a circle public the organization. a plate, which is kept revolving in a circle under the oven; by which means the heit is supplied at the smallest expense of feet. The temperature within the oven $\frac{1}{2}\text{ ind.}$ cated by a thermometer, according to which the application of the fuel is regulated.

the application of the fuel is regulated.

When the thermometer has reached about 300 degrees, the oven is charged; and the by a simple process, the door is closed industrial and air tight. In a quarter of an hoar, the vapour which is evolved from the dough, passes through a small aperture in the top of the oven which communicates with a still, down undergoes the process of death. feus undergoes the process of distillate. The only care required is, not to raise to temperature much above 500 degrees. When the alcohol ceases to drop, it is a stre significant the bread is sufficiently baked. The tiato complete a batch is about an hor and to complete a batch is about an host and three quarters. Each quartern loaf products about an ounce of proof spirit. The about tages of this invention are many and chiest. The bread is purified, and rendered of specior quality. The Eclectic Review for May says— Whave high authority for the following starment: When the King took the crown, before entered the House of Lords to dischet the late. Parliaments the late Parliament, he would not suffer it to be placed on his head. He said No," I will put it on myself;" which he did, and then turning instantly to Lord Grey, added—Now, my Lord, the coronation is over!" A Speech worthy of being transmitted to history, and an act of could fast. and an act of good taste, firmness, and co-sideration for his people, which will sate the country at least three hundred thousand pounds!

PRANCE.
The military availability of France may le The military availability of France may le in some degree, appreciated by the late fact that on army of 50,000 men was pat in metion for Belgium in twenty-four hours. Two of the king's sons, as colonels, marched with it. The males of the Royal family there, will not be respected unless they possess military habits, and take every opportunity to evince them and make a display of personal courage. It is a general saying that 'a good heart excuses many errors." In France it may also be said, utilitary grace and provess will excuse many faults. Not that the King's sons have faults.

The King of France was called from his bed by an express from Belgium with the news of the Dutch war. He rose and inne-diately commenced giving orders for the maintainance of the independence of the new nation. No doubt England is to pay laif the expenses.
