Which they contain respecting Puland, the actual situation and future prospects of which have now acquired additional importance, as it is manifest that almost every passing hour is a stride to the jail of its fate, whatever that may be. As to the critical and almost desperate condition of the general affairs of the practice of the parties, but unassisted, and apparently doomed, patriots, the total failure of their efforts to revolutionize Lithuania, the abortive issue of the attempt more recently made by Gen. Rizyeki to rouse the peasants and organize the imilitia in the neighbourhood of Cracow, and the immineucy of the peril which besets the capital, now that four hostile armies, unopposed, are radiating upon it from different points, these journals generally concur in their admission and accounts. The Messager des Chambres of Friday, states that the Russians were, by the last accounts, within three leagues of Warsaw, and that a crisis. Oct. 13.
