A frost had discoloured the summer bower:
The blast waited sad 'midst the cankered leaves,
The reaper stood mosing by gathered eleaves,
The mellow pomp of the rainbow woods.
Was stirted by the round of the rising fleeds:
And I knew by the cloud—by the wild wind's strain,
That winter draw near, with storms, again!

That waiter drew near, with storms, again:
Latered by the Occure its waters rolled.
Interir chargeful beauty of supplific and gold;
and day hooked down with its radiant sanders.
Where the blue waves danced round a thousand ister.
The slups went forth on the trackless reas,
Their white wings played in the joyous breeze:
Their prose rushed on 'midst the parted form:

I looked the arch of the midnight skies; With its blue and unsearchable mysteries:
The moon, 'midst an eloquent multitude,
Of unnumbered atars, her career pursued;
A clarm of sleep on the city fell,
All sounds lay husshed in that broading spoil—
By habbling brooks were the buds at rest,
And the wild-bird dreamed sweet on his downy no:
I stood where the deep'ning tempest passed;
The strong trees groaned in the sounding blast;
The murmuring deep with its wrecks rolled on,
The clouds overshadowed the mighty sun;
The low reeds bent by the streamlet's side
And bills to the thunder peal replied—
And lightning burst forth on its feafful way,
While the heasens were lit in its red arms!

To rouse all Nature with storms at will?

Hath he power to colour the anomer cloud—
To allay the tempest when the hills are howed?

Can he waken the spring with her festal wreath?

Can the sun grow dim by his lightest breath?

Will he come again, when death's vale is trod?

Mic then shall dare nummer. "There is no God.

is now, habitually mild, and obedient, and affectionate.

During the first summer after her illness, she was very unwilling to wear clothes, and would pull then off violently. At length her mother took one of her frocks and tried it on her sister, with a view of altering it for her. Julia had always been remarkable for her sense of justice in regard to property. This seemed to be awakened, and she took the frock and put it on herself. After this she was willing she was willing to wear clothes, and even cried for new ones. She has ever since been fond of dress. At any years of age she was taught to sew, and since that tune has learned to knit.
