It is now long since the public papers are neuroed, that h female had been apprehended at Bromen on a charge of huying committed ingiders of amparallelied atrocity. The slow progress made in criminal proceedings there, as is common through all Germany, has prevented her from being brought to trial and sentenced until lately. Our last papers from Europe centain the following account of the proceedings in the case of this woman,

Marguerite Timm received a tolerably good education, her father, a tailor at Bromen, lived in easy circumstances. In 8108, at the age of 20 years, she married one Mettemberg, a saddler, who also possessed some pro-berg, a saddler, who also possessed some property. Seven children were the fruit of this marriage, three of them survived their father, at whose decesse the widow found herself i possession of an ample fortune. In 1815, in the space of a few months after the decease of her husband, death also carried off her mother and her three remaining children. The following year her only brother also died, on his teturn home after a long absence, and when the property of the father was about to be divided.

In 1817, the wislow entered into a second marriage with a Mr. Getfried, with whom she, by her own confession, had carried on an illicit intercourse during the life of her first husband. Some days after the marriage. Gottfried died suddenly Six years elapsed, and she was on the point of marrying a Mr. Zinmerman, when he was attacked by a severe illness, and died. In 1826, the widow sald her house to a Mr. Rumpf, a cartwright, retaining, however, one apartment in it, for her own use. Some months expired, and the wife of Rumpf died in childhed, when the widow Gottfried took charge of the household of Rumpf. He was attacked from time to time with violent vomitings. On the 6th March, 1828, he perceived that a piece of bacon which had been cooked by the widow Onttfried, was covered with some strange substance. He caused it to be examined by his physician, who immediately declared that his physician, who immediately declared that there was a large quantity of arsenic on it.— On information given by the physician, the willow Gottfried was apprehended.

The police then received considerable information from different persons, in relation to the conduct of this woman. It was proved on the trial, and she confessed, that she had given arrenic to a number of persons, 15 of whom died in consequence, and seventeen others survived. On the trial, circumstances came out which justified a belief that she had given poison to other individuals, to whom it had not been fatal. In consequence of the number of murders proved against her, it was, however, thought necessary to go into an investigation of these cases. The woman confessed that she was indusire to give poison, and to see her victims at 12 o'clock, M., that long established and perish. The counsel, in her defence, endea- well known favern called Iv attribute her conduct to an irresistable devoured to avail himself of this latter declara-tion, to show that she was labouring under monomania and in consequence, that there was no criminal intention. Medical men who were examined on this point, declared that they could discover in her no physical cause which could give rise to such a monomania, and the defence in consequence did mana, and the defence in consequence during the state of the following is the judgment given by the criminal court of Bremen, on the 17th September, 1830.

In the trial held on Marguerite Timm, widow of the late Michael Christopher Gutt-fried, accused of poisoning and of other erimes, the Court declares the widow Gottfried, (who has besides committed sundry thefts, acts of swindling and perjury, as well as attempted to cause abortion,) convicted and guilty-1st. Of having assassinated, by means of oison, her father and mother, her three hildren, her first, and second husband, her brother, her betrothed Paul Themas Zimmerman, Mrs. Anne Louisa Meyerhulz, Mrs. John Mosses, the wife of the cartwright, John Christopher Rumpf, the wife of the cooper, Frederick Schmidt, and lastly, the wife of the locksmith, Frederick Kleine, at Hanover; as also of having besides caused the death,
