As the circumstance and condition of the coloured population in this state, has been a subject of absorbing interest; and experience has demonstrated that some legislative action thereon is indispensable at the present session, we propose that a committee be appointed by your body to co-operate with the standing committee of grievances and courts of justice of this house, to which that subject is referred, in order that similar reports may be simultaneously presented to the two houses.

We propose this, from a belief that such a course will not only render any system that may be adopted more perfect and effectual, but will greatly facilitate the action of the legislature upon this interesting question. A deputation from the senate being announced, Messrs. Rogers and Taney, members of that body, appeared within the bar, and accompanied by the house of delegates, and in accordance with the joint invitations of both houses, which had been personally communicated to them, the speaker elect was then attending in the senate chamber, where the senate, re-assembled the attendance of the speaker, with that of the other members of this house, to witness the qualification of the governor elect.

The speaker thereupon left the chair, and attended by the members of this house, went to the senate chamber, where the Honourable George Howard was duly qualified as the Governor of the state of Maryland, in the presence of both houses, in the manner and form prescribed by the constitution and laws thereof. The speaker, attended by the members of the house, returned and resumed the chair.

A FAIR

FOR the benefit of the Orphans' Asylum will be held in the Assembly Room in this city, on TUESDAY, the 31st inst. Any persons having articles prepared for the Fair, are respectfully requested to send them in the afternoon, to one of the Managers.

THE FAIR

Once more the Managers of the Female Asylum Society of this city of Annapolis, present to the public, with many thanks, for past favours, and a flattering hope of continued patronage. The return of this year is met by them with some painful feelings of solicitude, knowing as they do, that the success of any solid fund for the perpetuation of charity, they have to depend, almost entirely upon the profits derived from their Annual Fair. Year after year, however, the effort has been reiterated, and the result has enabled them to continue to those entrusted to their care the means of instruction and support. This encourages them still to expect those whom Providence has blessed with power to do good, the aid so much needed and we will say, so properly appropriated. We are aware that the season of winter is the poor, one of extreme sufferings and consequently, the rich are called upon to mitigate those sufferings by imparting of abundance; but pleasure demands her price, as well as benevolence; and those to the former, bring only a present gratification, forgotten as soon as received, those accorded to the latter yield a treasure to the stores of memory, which will not repay, with interest, the liberality that secured it. A glance at the scenes that pass around us is sufficient to prove the need of proof, the justice of the assistance that the children of this world are to their generation than the children of Ishtar. Taste and fancy, thoughtless of expense, regardless of consequences, exert their powers to fill the cup of pleasure to the rich and her votaries drink deeper and deeper her fascinations, without perceiving that it bitterness in the dregs. Her delight is often more dearly purchased than that of the more durable gratifications which come from the consciousness of doing good. They are in anxiety and disappointment, believing this, we shall, we trust, be forgiven to entertain the lovers of pleasure, as well as the lovers of piety, to come to our Fair, taste the pure delight of doing good. Last, and indeed the present season, has been marked with unusual mortality—deaths entered many a dwelling, and made breach in the little circle enclosed by walls. Affliction is calculated to soften the heart, and to call forth feelings of consolation for those, who friendly and needed the fostering hand of benevolence, snatch them from impending ruin. To whom the hand of God has touched with affliction, feel pity for the wretched impart that aid which will enable us to feed, and instruct, the lonely orphan; and let those who have escaped calamities which have opened their eyes, open the hand of charity to those whom God has written desolate as it regards good, but whose cause He has promised to take into his own hands. To the now located in the Asylum, we can have confidence as proofs of what may be done for the benefit of the wretched. They have been taken from extreme poverty and starvation, ignorant of all that was untaught in things that tend to improve the heart; they are now all together in sisterly affection, under the care of a Matron whom they regard as a mother, and who is herself a widow, school-teacher, exhibiting capacities for the education of useful knowledge, gratefully of the benefits they have received, and long in their whole deportment, how much effected in the unformed mind, and cious discipline, and considerate attention. It is indeed pleasing to contemplate woe, when we think of what they might have been, had not the Asylum received its peaceful refuge. Come then, we beseech you, our fellow citizens, and strangers, have taken a temporary residence at our Fair, and give, according to your ability, to the orphans who now are in your regard. The recollection of you thus do will cheer you even in grief; but it will be doubly delightful, if you should be confined to a pillow, which it inherits, is about to pass away, then sweet will be the remembrance that you have assisted in preserving a child of misfortune, the Asylum that it from ruin.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT

For this important office the gallant and patriotic M. JOHNSON has been chosen by the friends of General Jackson's party of the Union. To others who thought of it, it is no disparagement of his claims, on the American people, from their familiarity with his name in the legislative councils, and in the field of battle, in the most trying and enlarged views of the public interest, as are his feelings in behalf of the oppressed, and the unfortunate, who want gives wise direction to his heart, and no vulgar love of
