MARYLAND LEGISLATURE.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

TUESDAY, January 17th, 1832.

Mr. Teackle presented the memorial and petition of Lewis Ballard, Jr. and James P. Bus and others, of Somerset County, praying for the establishment of a State Bank.

Mr. Stockert presented the memorial of sundry citizens of Anne Arundel County, respecting the slaves and free black population of this State.

Also, the petition of Samuel Graham of Anne Arundel County, praying to be paid for a slave sentenced to the penitentiary.

Mr. Thomas Cecil, presented the memorial of John B. Morton, and others, also of Cecil County, relative to the black population.

And, Mr. Laurensen presented the memorial of William Patterson and others, relative to the width of Orleans street, of the city of Baltimore.

On motion by Mr. Laurensen, on the select committee, to which was referred the memorial of the President and directors of the People's Steam Navigation Company, to supply the vacancy occasioned by the absence of Mr. Hunt.

The house then proceeded to consider the second order of the day, being the preamble and resolutions from the senate, relative to re-chartering the United States Bank.

Mr. Teackle moved to amend the second resolution, by adding at the end thereof the following: "for twenty years from the termination of its present charter;

Provided, That the existing capital of the institution be augmented by fifteen millions of dollars, for the benefit of the people of the United States, to be appropriated among the states, for the supply of means for education in common schools, according to their respective representations in the popular branch of the national legislature."

Determined in the negative.

Mr. Teackle moved to amend said resolution by adding at the end thereof, the following proviso:—

Provided, That no branch shall be established in any state, other than that in which the principal bank is established, without the consent of the legislature of such state, and in that event, to be subject to a rate of taxation, upon the amount of capital employed therein, at the election of the legislature, not exceeding the average of assessments upon real and personal property thereof.

Mr. Teackle moved to amend said resolution by adding at the end thereof, the following proviso:—

Provided, That the said bank and all its branches and offices, and all the officers thereof, shall be prohibited from drawing any note of a denomination less than one hundred dollars—and from drawing any check in the nature, or in resemblance of a bank note for circulation, or for any other purpose.

Determined in the negative.

Mr. Teackle moved to amend said resolution by adding at the end thereof, the following proviso:—

Provided, That the said bank, and all its officers and all its officers thereof, shall be prohibited from drawing any check in the nature or resemblance of a bank note, for circulation, or for any other purpose.

Determined in the negative.

Mr. Teackle then moved to amend said resolutions, by adding at the end thereof, these words: "Under such restrictions and limitations as in their judgment may seem to comport with the best interests of the country."

On motion by Mr. Branner, said resolution was amended, by striking out in the fifth line thereof, the words "present."

Mr. Carmichael moved that the house do now adjourn.

Determined in the negative.

Mr. Carmichael then offered the following as a substitute, for the preamble and resolutions.

Resolved, That the said bank and all its branches and offices, and all the officers thereof, shall be prohibited from drawing any note of a denomination less than one hundred dollars—and from drawing any check in the nature, or in resemblance of a bank note for circulation, or for any other purpose.

Determined in the negative.

Resolved, That the said bank and all its branches and offices, and all the officers thereof, shall be prohibited from drawing any note of a denomination less than one hundred dollars—and from drawing any check in the nature, or in resemblance of a bank note for circulation, or for any other purpose.

Determined in the negative.

Resolved, That the said bank and all its branches and offices, and all the officers thereof, shall be prohibited from drawing any note of a denomination less than one hundred dollars—and from drawing any check in the nature, or in resemblance of a bank note for circulation, or for any other purpose.

The last No. of the African Repository and Colonial Journal, relating to Liberia, a well written diary, kept by Mr. J. Mechlin, upon a recent expedition to explore the country, adjacent to Mesurado, and learn its adaptation to agricultural purposes. After ascending the river Mesurado for some distance, the exploring party crossed the country to the sources of the Junk River, which is described as being not more than three yards wide, and two feet deep at the point of embarkation, in a canoe, but gradually expanding, until, at ten miles from its source, the stream is 150 yards wide, and deep enough to float a vessel of a hundred tons. At this point, the party embarked in a large, and the scenery is thus described.

As we descended the river, it gradually expanded, and at the distance of 25 miles from its source, we found it fully a mile wide; it is very winding in its course, in some places describing three-fourths of a circle, and in others, the shores, swelling out on one side, and receding on the other, formed a series of graceful curves, which, at every turn, offered to our view a continued succession of objects, each presenting new beauties to admire. We passed several villages delightfully situated on the banks, and embosomed in groves of plantain, banana and palm-trees. The shores were covered with vegetation splendid beyond description. Trees of singular form and foliage, springing from a deep, rich soil, reared their heads to an amazing height; while their branches were covered with a beautiful drapery of vines, forming a dense shade, and hanging, in many places, in festoons, to the surface of the water. The fertility of the soil gave a depth and vividness to the green, which was finely relieved by the varied hues of the flowers that decked the forest; and the surface of the stream, as smooth as a polished mirror, reflected with a marvellous truth the variegated beauties of the vegetation that clothed its banks. As we approached native village, groups of the inhabitants would assemble on the shore, inviting us by their gestures to land; occasionally, a light canoe might be seen shooting across the stream, while overhead, troops of monkeys pursued their gambols among the trees; in short, every thing combined to give animation to the landscape, the beauties of which description can never equal.

A land so beautiful, and soil so luxuriant, is almost sufficient to tempt a white emigrant to leave our colder skies, and less kindly vegetation for its sunny clime and gorgeous forestry; to a coloured man, who daily estimated the privileges of the colonists, one would think that the picture would be irresistible, especially with such a snug, little back-ground as is given in the following description of a native African village:— The houses are placed without any attention to order or regularity, and are generally of a circular form, with high conical roofs thatched with leaves, and are very dry and comfortable, the caves project a considerable distance beyond the walls, and form a shade in which the natives, during the heat of the day, recline on rude couches formed of banks of clay hardened in the sun, and covered with mats; the spaces in front of the houses are swept twice a day; and no object of any kind of dirt is suffered to be deposited within the limits of the town; in fact no place presents an air of greater neatness than a well ordered African village.

The natives of this region are rather anxious, than otherwise, that the colonists should come and settle among them; and Mr. Mechlin appears to be decidedly in favour of the colony's availing itself of the agricultural advantages of so fertile a country. The land on either side of the bank is described as sufficiently elevated, to secure it from inundation.

In some places it gradually rises from the water's edge to the height of 100 to 200 feet; the country a little further removed from the river is higher and more diversified with hills and dales, and covered with dense forests of valuable timber, much of which will answer for ship building. The soil is of a good quality, and capable of producing, in the most fertile manner, all the necessaries of life. It is not surprising, in a territory, equal in extent to that of the United States, that I am confident, many situations for agricultural settlements might be selected, particularly in point of local advantages, to say no more of the communication with Mesurado, can be kept up either by sea, or by means of our small vessels, or by ascending to the head of the river, and crossing the narrow strip of land that separates it from the Mesurado.

This is no mean acquisition to the resources of this new thriving colony; and as the Monrovia seem to carry with them a share of the enterprise of the country, when they emigrate, their settlements will doubtless be soon extended into the interior, through the interior regions here described. Mr. Mechlin mentions elsewhere in his Journal the general of the "Kings" of the country, who formerly leagued against the emigrants, are now anxious to place themselves under the protection of the colony; a fact equally creditable to the energy and the moderation of the latter in its collisions with the natives, and chastisement of their insolence. In truth, the Queah (queer) people and some other tribes, have, for the security that is extended to them, been induced to settle in the vicinity of Monrovia. The civilizing influence of the colony is, therefore, beginning to be already felt among these rude tribes, in healing their broils, and promoting the confidence of society among them. At a late "congress of sovereigns," they expressed themselves to this effect:—

The principal object of their meeting was to request us to take them under our protection, and establish a settlement in their neighbourhood, and their motive for making this request was to secure themselves from King Botswain, of whose power they have the greatest dread. They said they were well assured they would not be molested, if it was known we had received them as subjects of the colony, as they had never known an instance where the colonists, or those protected by them, had been interfered with by any of the Botswain's war parties.

We cannot take leave of Mr. Mechlin's Journal, without copying his account of a strange and characteristic institution, that seems to have been long established among this simple people. The African Thema here described, is no contemptible rival in the efficiency with which it organizes its victims, of the famed "Secret Tribunal" of Germany. The institution must have proved a powerful check upon the able Lathorians who were thus brought to condign punishment, as well as their petty inmates, whose amiable necessities were so inflexibly denied. Now, that the institution is abolished, we can easily imagine that, as Mr. Mechlin observes, the King who has fifteen or twenty wives finds it difficult to govern them.

Another cause of their convening, was to make formal complaint that several natives from Bassa, at present residing in the colony, and who are, in a great measure, civilized, had procured from Devil, as the natives translate it, Grippa (or Devil, as the natives translate it) employed by them, to keep their females in proper subjection. This demon, as we can easily see, is nothing more than the head man, or chief, of a secret association, termed "Grippa," bearing a close resemblance to the secret societies to be found among the Bullons and Sosous, in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, though not possessing as extensive powers. It is among the former termed the Purra, and among the latter Semo. These institutions have been fully and accurately described by Dr. Winterbottom, formerly physician to Sierra Leone, and to whose work I beg leave to refer you. This head Grippa, man, disguised so as to render his appearance as hideous as possible, issues at night from the grove set apart for the celebration of their mysterious rites, and entering the town with the most dreadful howlings, proceeds to inquire into the conduct of the females, and if any of their lords, he punishes them according to the aggravation of the offence. The women are kept in profound ignorance of the real character of their tormentor, and really believe him to be a supernatural being or demon. The discovery of the secrets of this society is invariably punished with death, which is executed in so secret a manner, that the offender suddenly disappears, none but the initiated know how, and the others, so great is their dread of this institution, dare not inquire; but since several of the natives have been educated in the colony, they have, in a great measure, divested themselves of their superstitious, and do not hesitate to reveal the secret to the women who resort to the Cape; these, when convinced that the being whose power they so much dreaded, is nothing more than mortal, are no longer to be kept in the same slavish subjection, and a King, who has 15 or 20 wives, finds it difficult to govern them.
