In doing this, although conscious that they need the indulgence of the Society for which they have acted, they yet feel the satisfaction of knowing that they have, to the best of their judgment and power, guarded the interest of the Institution, and promoted the objects for which it was originally formed.

There has been, of course, but little varie ty in their operations, as the limited state of their funds, prevented their enlarging the number of the inmates of the Asylum; consequently the detail of their proceeding must be brief. They would, however, white upon this subject, state that if any case of extreme destitution had occurred in this city, they should have felt it to be their duty to have opened the doors of the Asylum to its subject, trusting that Providence, through the instrumentality of a generous public, would have given means to meet the exigency; but they could not feel justified to search out distant objects, however peritorious or afflicted, un-less the means to do so had been more imme-

Previous to the last meeting the Managers had contracted to bind out one of the pupils in the Asylum, because in situation offered, held out greet advantages for her, and because her removal would make room for one, more destitute. She accordingly left us in April, and we have had the satisfaction of receiving conwe have had the satisfaction of receiving con-tinued reports of her good conduct, and use-ful acquirements. This circumstance is gra-tifying to us, and reflects credit upon the con-duct of the Matron, whose time and energies are devoted to the instruction and comfort of these little ones, and who continues to merit and receive the commendation and support of and receive the commendation and support of those whose business it is to watch over and investigate the concerns of the Asylum.— The vacancy occasioned by the removal of this child was immediately filled by a little girl of about four years of age, practice of the standard of t not pleasant to them. Their father was absent weeks at a time, and when present no safeguard to them. One of the Managers of the Institution procured a home for the one whose age precluded her from our protection, and the other, a poor, neglected, miserable looking object, was admitted into the Asylum.—There she has found a mother and sisters who have united in ministering to her necessities, and initiating her into the peaceful and instructive regulations prescribed for its observance. Since they Providence has reobservance. Since then Providence has removed her father, and she is now literally without a parent. She is at present a happy little girl; indeed few houses exhibit a preture of happiness more gratifying than is to be found in the cheerful countenances of our p. M. bservance. On Monday morning last, at an early hour, the house of Mrs. Watson, a widow lady, residing at the head of South River, was discovered to be on fire, and in a short time was burned to the ground. By this calamity a widow with eleven children, seven of whom are daughters, have been deprived of a home. They are without clothing, and are now sheltered by the kindness of their neighbours. Of the MANAGERS of the Female Orphan

The Managers of the Female Orphan Society of the city of Annapolis, are again called upon, in the order of Providence, to render an account of their stewardships for another year. In doing this, although contacts the season of the less of purposes, she these advantages to the best of purposes, she was a blessing to the community in which she was a blessing to the community in which she lived, and her praise was in all the churches. For herself there is nothing to regret—sho lived b loved and respected, and she died lamented by all who knew her—although far advanced in years, she was in the possession of unimpaired faculties—her usefulness was not diminished and her energies were unimpaired. Had she lived loved secretion. not diminished and her energies were unim-paired—Had she lived longer, according to human calculation, the days of darkness would have come, in which, worn out nature could have taken no pleasure. At a meeting of the Society about a fortnight before her death, her eye sparkled with its wested ani-mation, as she listened to the pleasing intel-ligence that our Orphans had received another year's support; who, that was then present would have thought that before another month, that eye would have been closed in death, > the summons may arrive. One consideration however remains for the consolution of the Society—If the work they are engaged in, is in its motive pure, and carried on in humble dependence on Divine aid, it will succeed and prosper.—Let us do our duty, and He who has by the mouth of his servant styled himself the Father of the Fatherless, will himself bless our efforts, whatever haman instruments e may in his wisdom think fit to remove.
