MARK MID A TEE

A German gentleman having made a pur-chase of a thousand bags of coffee, directed the Irish porter of the mercantile house to which he was consigned, to mark the coffee with the initial of his paternal name (D.). The pronunciation, however, was unfortunate for the supercargo: mark him, said be, mid a Tee.' Yes your hosour,' replied Pat, and immediately stamped every bag of the precious product of the South with the letter T. The irritated German lost all his wonted good humour at seeing the blumber; and as the lookers on were convalsed with laughter, the following dialogue took place. lowing dialogue took place:
D. Mr. Padrick! - Mr. Padrick! did I not
