

A CARD. The Lectures on Natural Philosophy at St. John's College, were discontinued for two weeks, to be resumed on the first Wednesday after Commencement.

SIMULTANEOUS MEETING OF TEMPERANCE SOCIETIES.

The attention of the friends of the Temperance Reformation, is earnestly requested to the resolution, passed at the late meeting of our State Society, approving of the proposition to hold meetings of all the Temperance Associations throughout the Union, on Tuesday, the 9th of the present month. Arrangements should be made for delivering Addresses, enlarging as much as possible the Societies already formed, and forming them in places where there are none. It is hoped that on this occasion the recommendation of the State Society, with respect to the nomination of Delegates to the Temperance Convention, to be held in Philadelphia in May next, and to the necessity of contributing to the funds of that Society, will not be forgotten. The important object of employing an Agent for the State can never be effected, neither can the debts incurred for printing be discharged without aid from the Auxiliary Societies.

Editors in the State will subvert the cause of Temperance by publishing the above.

We extract the following graphic sketch of our city from a letter addressed to the Editor of the "Republican Banner," a neat and well conducted paper published at Williamsport, in this State:

"I am much pleased with the situation and appearance of Annapolis. There are here the vestiges of former wealth and the remains of ancient grandeur. A central place, it stands in the distance, though possession of the best harbor on the Chesapeake. It may be said to be a fine illustration of the progress of nature, and constitute it an active and healthy city. It is a spot lovely for its scenery, and the interesting associations which it presents to the mind, as well as for the beauty of its situation, and grandeur of the surrounding prospects, over land and water, so charmingly combined."

For the Maryland Gazette.

I was induced upon reading the memorial of the Visitors of the College to the Legislature, to ascertain what is the sum which the College might with strict justice claim of the State. A statement is easily made:

Table with financial data: Amount of annuity from January 1806 (when the law was drawn) to 6th January, 1825 - $26,225 50; Balance of annuity from 6th January, 1825 (the day on which the law allowing to the College $1,000 commenced its operation) till 1824, when the proceeds of the lottery were invested - $2,900 00; Balance of annuity from 1st day (January 6, 1824) to January 6, 1833 - $2,600 00; Amount of principal - $1,433 33; Interest on the several annuities - $1,370 00; Total - $32,225 50.

This is the sum which, since the repealing law, has been withheld from the College. It is understood that the authors of this law became sensible that the act was unjust, and perhaps very few of those who voted for the repeal could have been induced so to vote, if the subject had been correctly understood by them.

The obligation of the state to appropriate this fund to education was never questioned, and the repealing law contained a pledge that it should be so appropriated.

It was enacted (1803, ch. 85,) that "the said sums respectively, shall be and remain in the treasury subject to the appropriation of the legislature to literary purposes, and for disseminating learning in the several counties of this State, and not to other or different purposes." "Honesty is the best policy." Neither the State treasury nor the primary schools has gained any thing by this breach of the public faith. Men who are opposed to colleges or the liberal endowment of them, never are disposed to build up useful county schools. County schools are of less value now than they were then: suitable teachers for inferior schools are now rarely to be found. He is an ignorant indeed, who does not know that without a college and a suitable provision for the instruction of teachers, our primary school fund will never be of benefit to the rich or the poor; and the day is not far distant when the school fund being found to be useless for want of good teachers, will be withdrawn in order to apply it to far different purposes.

MAINE.

A joint committee of the Maine Legislature have made a report on the South Carolina documents, submitted to them. The following are the three leading resolutions:

Resolved, That we are not insensible to the wrongs and sufferings of our brethren of South Carolina under the unjust and oppressive burdens imposed upon them by the tariff of high protective duties. But while we deplore their grievances, and are ready to unite with them in any and every peaceful and lawful mode of redress, we cannot nor will we give our countenance and support to their projected scheme for relief. We regard nullification as neither a safe, peaceable, or constitutional remedy; but as sound and dangerous in theory, and in practice leading directly to civil commotion, dissension and anarchy. We

He repeated the words, 'I am not afraid of you, and I am not afraid of death.' The crowd, which had gathered round him, began to murmur. He repeated the words, 'I am not afraid of you, and I am not afraid of death.' The crowd, which had gathered round him, began to murmur. He repeated the words, 'I am not afraid of you, and I am not afraid of death.' The crowd, which had gathered round him, began to murmur.

Resolved, That it is due to a spirit of mutual conciliation, to the demands of justice, to a decent regard for the opinions and interests of large portions of the community, and absolutely necessary to the preservation of the Union, that the tariff laws should be gradually but speedily abated to the imposition of such duties only as are required for the purposes of a revenue sufficient to defray the ordinary expenses of the General Government confined to its appropriate objects, and economically administered.

The U. S. sloop of war Phœnix, at Portsmouth, N. H. we learn, is fitted for sea with all possible expedition; and the Boston, Erie, and Frigate Constitution at the Navy Yard Charlestown, are ordered to be put in readiness for sea.

We observe that the Government is forwarding munitions of war by every opportunity, for the new fortifications in Charleston harbour. The fine new brig General Sumpter, now fitting out by Messrs. Back & Hedrick as a regular packet between this and Charleston, is taking on board a number of gun carriages calculated for long marches and twenty four pounders.—Dial, Jan.

The Charles in correspondence of the Norfolk Beacon, under date of the 3th inst. says:—Mr. Linton, the Commissioner from Virginia, dined with the Governor yesterday, and today they are riding out together. This looks well. A gentleman has just informed me that an attempt was made yesterday to administer the Test Oath to the City Guard, but every one refused to take it; consequently, they were all discharged, and the city guarded last night by a volunteer company. No other news at present.

Mrs. Pollard was consumed by fire, and three of her daughters lost their lives.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL.

We learn with pleasure, from a source to be entirely relied upon, that the progress of the work upon the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal has been such within a few months past, as to exceed expectation, and agreeably to disappoint most of those who are engaged in it. During the month of May ensuing, we learn that the water will be admitted into the whole line of the canal from tide-water to the head of Harper's Ferry Falls, so as to make the whole distance navigable at once. The workmen are putting the coping on the aqueduct across the Monocacy, which is said to be a splendid structure, not excelled if equaled by any thing of the kind in the United States, and in two weeks that work will be completed. We learn further, that more than one-half of the lockage to Cumberland is overcome in reaching the head of Harper's Ferry Falls, though that is but one-third of the distance.—Not Int.

INDIANS.

We have seen reports going the round of the papers, that the Indians on the upper Mississippi were agitating the question of a league, with a view to another war upon our frontiers. We do not believe the rumour; but we cannot doubt that those with whom it originated, are much in love with the public disbursements, and would fain continue them. A letter from a gentleman at Chicago to Mr. Brewster, dated January 1, says:—It has been so reported that the Indians are again becoming troublesome, and preparing for war; but it is false—they dare not take the field again. Some brawling white men had a dispute with the Indians on the Illinois river, which was immediately magnified into a war; and a company of rangers have gone from Danville to Hennipen to keep the peace."

EXECUTION OF A TURKISH TRAITOR.

Into this space two men stepped from the body of the guard; one, old and ugly, and meanly dressed; the other, young and handsome, and richly attired in the old costume. The office of one of them was not doubtful by the long ataghan in his hand, the other, by his firm step, and the unconcerned air with which he glanced around, might have passed for the proudest marshal, had not his manner soon announced that he was destined to act a more important part, and he knew it, for he knelt down without prompting, and suffered his thumbs to be tied behind him with a piece of string, that he might not involuntarily interfere with the operation. The executioner then took off his turban, tied up Mohamed's lock, and adjusted the denounced head in the most favourable position for displaying his skill, desiring the owner to hold it steady.—So peculiarly adapted is the western costume, having no collars, to the despatch of head-cutting, as to make it probable that it was originally adopted by slavish courtiers as a symbol of their necks being always ready. This preparation did not occupy two minutes, during which it was ascertained which of the two showed greatest coolness. Drawing then his ataghan, the executioner held it up in the act to strike, and in this position recited the offence—"conspiracy," &c. It was an awful picture; a moment of breathless excitement to all present excepting the two actors, the one of whom, the most interested in the event, appearing the most careless. Being
