Ackens was the victim of a fraternity who to the disgrace of our city, are permitted to carry on their unlawful labours in every street and alley, in bold defiance of the penalties they deserve. The sin of his death fles, in fact, at the door of a Vender of Lottery Tickets. The outrageous extent to which he was duped will hardly be credited. In the short space of between seven and eight months, he embezzled the enormous sum of EIGHTER THOUSAND DOLLARS, every cent of which was lost on Lottery Tickets.

I have no desire to excite unmerited ill will against any member of the community; it is not my wish to draw down undeserved odium apon any particular mode, whereby men gain their livelihood; but of a traffic which even permits such a monstrous fraud as I have mentioned, I shall speak in no measured terms—and I have mistaken the temper of my fellow citizens, if they are not prepared to sustain me in saying, that it must be broken op. They who follow it are daily and hourly violating the law of the land, and must be watched and detected and punished.

It was probably written only a few moments before he committed the awful act to which he was hurried before a constant of the conditions of the manual actions and the conditions of the co by the goadings of remorse. The word 'FAST' is as great a contradiction as we have in the language. The Delaware was fast, because the ice was immovable; and then the ice disappeared very fast. For the contrary reason—it was loose. A clock is called fast, when it goes quicker than time, but a man is told to stand fast when he is desired to remain stationary. People fast, when they have nothing to eat, and eat fast, consequently when opportunity offers. cept, unake haste slowly, involves a kind of contradiction, but we suppose that it must mean, if you wish to go fast in an incertain path, take hold fast of every assistance.
