

shall be settled, which must be decided two or three years, that Annapolis will be the Seat of Government by a constitutional provision, which will give it a permanency and stability that she has not enjoyed for the last half century. Independent of the unnecessary expense of removal, there is to place in Maryland so central and convenient to the members, the accommodations are excellent, quite sufficient, and there are no objects to divert the attention of the members from their studies. The College, the most important building, has been already described.
The Government House is a large and commodious building situated directly on the water-edge, has a large garden, yard, &c. and is under the care of a steward. The Governor for the time being occupies it occasionally, always during the session, and renders it the seat of Maryland hospitality and refined pleasure.
The Fort is separated from the Government House and garden by a narrow street, and is one of the most beautiful spots in the city. It has the officers' quarters, barracks, hospital and magazine, all in the first order and convenient with the advantage of a large garden stocked with vegetables, fruits, and grape vines which bear luxuriantly, and a beautiful parade ground. There are two or three officers' quarters, and about 60 or 70 non-commissioned officers and privates, who cultivate the grounds and do duty daily within the walls. There are three places of worship, one for Episcopals, a large Church near the State House and immediately in view of the main street entering the town; one for Methodists, just in rear of the State House; and a small Chapel for Catholics, near the old residence of the late venerable Carroll. The country has erected a handsome and commodious Court House near the Farmers' Bank, which has added much to the appearance of the city.
The Ball Room, Theatre and the late Williamson's Hotel, all situated in friendly contiguity on two streets. The Ball Room is one of the oldest buildings, and since dancing has become rather unfashionable, is not kept in that repair and order that it deserves, it has a supper, card and ladies room at each extremity. It is lighted by three chandeliers, and ornamented with a full length portrait of the second Lord Baltimore; but we republicans do not seem to have quite so much respect for lordlings as they could wish, for to the perversion of all taste, the gilt frame is either painted or white-washed, and they have been so irreverent as to sprinkle a few spots on the lordship's visage.—The Corporation some years ago, made an exchange with Mr.
Peale of the first Lord Baltimore's likeness for those of the first six Governors of the State, some of which are well done, and ornate the room. It was not a bad bargain, if we consider that some of them were worth dozen Lords at any time.—The Theatre is small wooden structure, but sufficiently large to accommodate the company which the city affords. The City Hotel is so well known every where, that it needs no description; it is only necessary to say, that it is now well kept, and if the urbanity of the present bar, and recommendations, we need desire no better.
Many of the private buildings are large and well built, have an antique appearance, and are generally surrounded by fine gardens and grass plots. The Market House is small, and when I saw it, was badly supplied, but I am told that there is no lack of the good things of this life in the city, which an acquaintance with the hospitality of the place verifies. The Harbour is commodious and safe from winds.

Launches were allowed to Culpeper river, (where above comparative of the produce comes from.)
It is raging furiously, as to come to town. I have heard of a plan to bring every negro—others half, thirty, it would appear from the above that the of Matanzas in ordinary times is 16,000.]

CHARLESTON, April 27.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.

Four companies of the U. S. Artillery sailed on Thursday last, on board the ship H. Alford for Fort Mifflin. Under the command of Major Kirby. The officers accompanying Major Kirby, were Captains Lyons, Fraser, Galt, and Lieutenants Ringgold, and Barnes, and Assistant Sergeant Huskell.
Two companies of Artillery, under the command of Captain Washington, sailed yesterday for Fort Mifflin. The officers accompanying Major Kirby, were Captains Lyons, Fraser, Galt, and
Sergeant Huskell.
The British officers who suffered were Major Sallier, Capt. Wright, and Adjutant Tur-ley, severely; and Capt. Harley, Esuigns Rourke, Catagon, and Young, and volunteer Kennedy, slightly wounded; Major Sallier was shot through the breast, and his case is doubtful; Captain Wright, I have heard is dead. The conduct of Ensign Woodridge was on this occasion, particularly fine. Since his wound on the 29th of September, he has not been able to do duty from the fracture of his leg; he however, accompanied Major Sallier to the front of the field, and when the enemy broke, on the fall of their leader, he rushed amongst them and tore off his uniform, saying that until then he was always proud of wearing a red jacket, but that he never would wear one again unless they retrieved their character as Englishmen. They returned to the charge, in which he joined only in his shirt. While this took place upon the right of our line, the left was kept equally employed, for the enemy simultaneously attacked the light house, Saldana's redoubt and the Pastelleiro. They were met in Gen. Saldana's usual way, that is, allowed to come within pistol shot before he opened upon them, when a deadly fire of artillery, musketry and rockets, was thrown in which forced them to retire with precipitation; and, as our men were under cover, while they were exposed, the enemy's loss was very great. Our loss on this point was 27 killed and wounded, including an officer. The enemy also made a demonstration of attack towards Acaportene, but the Volunteers of Donna Maria, taking up a position in front, supported by the three squadrons of Lancers, and some battalions of the Volunteers of the town, beside the 15th and 18th Infantry, kept them in check. The French, Irish and three other battalions of the line, were in reserve at Bom Succeso.
That these attempts of the enemy would have been converted into their long talked of general attack there is little doubt, had they, in the first instance, been crowned with success. This might be judged of by the exercises made by their officers, particularly of three field-officers of rank, who in vain endeavoured to induce their men against coming forward, as well as from the columns of reserve which were formed.—Eighty bodies of the enemy were left on the ground, and amongst them that of a major, whose name ran into the lines on the fall of his major.
The Minister of Marine is again amongst the number of our wounded. The result of the day may be thus stated—the complete repulse of the enemy towards the Foz, and the possession of our position on the heights of Antas, with our sentries now posted where of the Miguelites were yesterday. Their loss is estimated at from 600 to 700 and 800. Upon other points there is little to say, save that the landing of provisions has been very tri-fing for the last two days, in consequence of five boatmen having been killed and wounded on Saturday night passing over the bar, and the appearance of gun-boats from Mattozinhos.

TO CLEANSE BEDSTEADS.

Scald the bedsteads with boiling vinegar.
The joints and tenons should be held in place for several moments, and in all places where the bugs and eggs are depositing, the hot vinegar should be poured over freely. The bed cover should likewise be held in the hot vinegar. By strictly attending to these directions, you will effectually destroy both the bugs and their eggs. But this will not prevent your bedsteads being again infested; you will, therefore, make use of the following mixture:—Alcohol, half a pint, spirits turpentine, half a pint, camphor, half ounce, mix well together, and put it on with a painter's brush. If the bedstead is not old, this mixture will answer without the wash. It dries instantly, and does not soil the bed clothes in the least. It is said that when both these means are applied in succession, the remedy is infallible.

FOREIGN.

EIGHT DAYS LATER FROM ENGLAND.
The packet ship South America has arrived at New-York from Liverpool, bringing London papers to the 1st April, and Liverpool to the 2d, both inclusive. We make the extracts from the New York Daily Advertiser.

The most important news is from Portugal; the report received in this country, from Lisbon, of Don Miguel's forces having been repulsed before Oporto, proves to be correct.— The dates from Oporto received at London were down to the 25th of March—Vice Admiral Sartorius had resigned, but the London Times of the 1st is of opinion that his difficulties with the Government were adjusted.
Don Pedro's situation on the whole is no worse, and may be considered rather better.
OPORTO, March 25.

I wrote to you yesterday morning, or rather Saturday night, by the Speedy, given you a full account of the affairs of the squadron, which I had been to visit at Vigo, and I came back just in time to witness part of a very brilliant affair which took place yesterday, and which ended most favourably for the cause of Don Pedro.

The enemy commenced an attack about 10 o'clock upon a redoubt which we had commenced the night before, upon the hill of Antas, in front of Congregados and Bom Fin.
Between 2,000 and 3,000 men advanced in column, covered by a cloud of skirmishers.
The position was defended only by three companies of the fifth Cacadores, who were forced to retire before support could reach them. The usual skirmishing was kept up, while the enemy were destroying the wine-pipes which had been conveyed to the hill, and most of them were burned. The fire from our batteries being heavy and well directed, kept their columns in check. Sharp firing continued until between 2 and 3 o'clock, when the Marshal ordered the hill to be retaken.

For this purpose the first and second English battalions, under the command of Major Sallier and Brown, the 5th Cacadores, and three companies of the 3d Infantry, supported by two squadrons of Lancers, advanced to retake the front of the position, while General Schwabach directed the 9th Infantry three companies of the 10th, and one company of the 12th Cacadores, supported by a squadron of the 10th Cavalry, to gain the height from the Valongo road on the enemy's left flank.

We are authorised to announce to the of Annapolis, and Anne Arundel county, that ROBERT WELCH of Hen. is a Candidate for the next Sheriffship.

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S COMPLETE WORKS.

number will contain as much matter as two volumes, and will be furnished to subscribers at the unprecedented low price of 57 1/2 cents one half, it is believed, than they were ever sold, even at auction.

Persons owning part of the works will be furnished a sufficient number of these, if wished, to make them complete.
Considering the low price at which the work
