CAPTAIN PADDOCK.
The following particulars are given in the New Bedford Gazette of Wednesday, relative to the melancholy tragedy at Valparaiso, in which Captain Paddock (whose execution by the civil authorities of that place was mentioned in our paper of Thursday) was so unfortunately engaged.—Com. Adv.
It appears that the Catharine had put into Talcahuana, leaky, a bolt being loose in her bow—it was repaired, but imperfectly, as afterwards appeared, and on the 12th of Aug. the ship sailed, and proceeded for the Off-shore Ground. The vessel became so leaky that they were obliged to bear up for port, to repair, and accordingly reached Valparaiso on the 17th of December. On the 20th Captain Paddock considered himself unwell, and sent for a doctor on board, and told him that he had been poisoned by the Consul, who, it appeared, he had not seen, as he was absent at Santiago. The doctor saw that he was inclined to delirium, and requested the mate to have a watch kept over him, to prevent his jumping out of the cabin windows, which was complied with.
The next morning, the mate sent ashore to the Consul's counting house, and informed Mr. George Carnes, the head clerk, who had the control of the business in Mr. Bishop's absence, of the circumstances. Mr. C. went on board and invited the captain to remove on shore to his house on the hill until he should become better; and they took such articles as might be wanted, and went to the house, and after they had put things to rights, walked down to the counting house together. Mr. C. stopped to speak to some one in the street, when Captain Paddock went in to the counting house, and in an instant drew a knife and planted it in the heart of the Spanish clerk, who sprang to the street door and fell dead without speaking. He then made for a lad named Pelric, who was at another desk, but he escaped by getting out of a back door, and shutting it. Capt. P. then sprang to the street door where he met Mr. Carnes, whom he stabbed to the heart; and ran for the place where his boat lay, and on his way fell in with Mr. Wheelwright, who was engaged in conversation with another person, and gave him a stab in the breast bone, and three other severe cuts. A Mr. Budge then attracted his attention, and he fell at him, but he fortunately got out of his way by stepping into the house and shutting the door, which Captain P. stuck his knife in.
The noise was heard in a watch-maker's shop opposite, and Dr. Juanjo Le Rane, one of the most respectable citizens of Chili, went to the door to ascertain the cause. As soon as he came in sight, Capt. P. deliberately put his arm around his waist and plunged the knife into the heart of the old man, who fell dead without a struggle. The man of the street, still ignorant of what was going on, went towards the door where he was met by Paddock, but by turning and making a spring into the back street, escaped with three severe cuts. By this time the peones [labourers] had gathered, and commenced pelting him with stones, one of which brought him to the ground and in the act of securing him and taking away the knife, one person was wounded so that he died the next day, and four more were badly cut. In his pocket were found two spare knives, which, with the bloody one, were fixed with springs to prevent their shutting, and the points were ground sharp on both sides. Le Rane was a great friend to the Americans in Chili, and had left a family of twelve children.

LATER FROM EUROPE.
The ship Meridian, at New York from Havre, sailed on the 6th April, bringing to the editors of the Courier and Enquirer Paris papers of the 5th, containing London dates of the 2d April.
The most interesting intelligence contained in these journals is a full confirmation of the capture of Smyrna by a detachment of the Egyptian army.—an event which appears to have excited considerable commotion among the diplomatic body at Constantinople. It would seem that the Representative of France in that capital warmly urged the necessity of sending back the Russian succour which had arrived there, but as far as we can yet discover, without effect. A Russian land force seems also advancing on the Turkish territories. It is very possible that important consequences may grow out of this state of things; it would be useless however to indulge in any surmises as to what those consequences may be, dependent as they are, on hundreds of contingencies.
It would appear that England is also about to assume a warlike attitude in the Levant. The ships of the line, Malabar, Warspite, Edinburgh, and Bellerophon, are ordered for the Mediterranean, and will be joined by the Saint Vincent and Britannia, from the Lisbon station.

STILL LATER.
The ship Charlemagne, at New York from Havre, brings papers to the 6th April, and the ship William Byrnes, also at New York from Liverpool, brings London journals of the 3rd and Liverpool of the 4th of the same month.
The protested draft drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury on the French Government came back in the Charlemagne.
REJECTION OF THE FRENCH PROPOSITIONS BY THE PACIA OF EGYPT.
The latest intelligence from Turkey is contained in a communication from Paris, under date of April 5, and is as follows:
We have received by the highest importance conveyance, news of the recent date of the 11th March. This news arrived at Toulon by the brig La Cygne, which at the same time conveyed despatches to be forwarded with the greatest haste to Government. The following are the particulars of this news.

The Pacha of Egypt Mehemed Ali, has refused to accept the propositions made by France on the subject of the war between Egypt and Turkey.
Admiral Roussin having despatched an express to Alexandria, to make known to our Consul General, the terms of the propositions which had been agreed on at Constantinople, in concert with the English and Austrian Ambassadors, to arrest the march of Ibrahim and remove every pretext for the intervention of Russia, M. de Missault, the French Consul General, demanded and immediately obtained a conference with Mehemed Ali. The Pacha, who had also received despatches from Ibrahim, received our Consul coolly, and flatly refused to transmit to his son restrictions on his march to Constantinople. It appears that he was indignant at the part assigned him in the propositions of the powers, and particularly when he learned that conditions were made for him, without previously consulting him. Our Consul immediately expedited the brig Le Cygne to carry this news.
It will be seen that this news is of the highest importance. It explains sufficiently clear the conduct of Ibrahim, and his military movements executed after the convention concluded between Admiral Roussin and the Porte. It further augments the embarrassment in which our Ambassador at Constantinople must find himself, and renders the intervention of Russia almost certain. The following is a letter from another quarter, from Odessa, of the 15th March which does not give to affairs in the east a more favourable aspect.
A vessel arrived from Constantinople in sixty-four hours, has brought accounts that the Russian fleet was still tranquilly at anchor in the Bosphorus. Meantime, Government has freighted a great number of merchant vessels, which are destined to take on board and carry to Constantinople the Russian detachment of troops which is advancing by forced marches to this quarter, in case events in Turkey should render such a measure necessary. The departure of these troops will infallibly take place if Ibrahim again advances further, particularly as the French Ambassador only guaranteed peace on condition that the Russian fleet should depart, and this condition which was a sine qua non, not having been complied with, France will not consider herself bound.
