

MISCELLANY.

From the Washington City Chronicle. ENTERING ROME.

By CHARLES CONSTANTINE FINE, D. D. In hystis, nota, auspiciis illa incho. Roma—Vir. O Roma, when thy hoary walls, O Rome! Again a pilgrim from thy native hills...

When I landed on the plains of France, And first yet more unhappy, all realms; A garden wide, a scene of woe and pain...

From the sweet vineyards, in the arms of peace, Thou shouldst remember when we last, The streams of blood that were the curse of life...

When down the fertile plain, thy shouts With hoarsest voice, till earth and sky were rent...

But what, Bologna, shall I long for thee? Far famed in story—Glorious in the past; But cease the memory, and let me see...

By the bust of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, from whom the ship derives its name—see it commanded by Capt. W. Lee.

From the Rochester Gen. A. ARGUMENT. 'Well, well, I think it's likely; but don't tease me any more you saucy jester! your brother has married a poor girl, one whom I forbid him to marry, and I won't forgive him if they all starve together, and there's the end on't.'

The speech was addressed to a beautiful girl scarcely eighteen years old—beautiful as the lily which hides itself away under the dark waters. She was parting the silver locks on her father's high, handsome forehead...

'Dear father do forgive him; you don't know what a beautiful girl he has married, and—' 'I think it's likely,' said the old man, 'but don't tease me, and open the door a little, this pleagery room smokes so now give me my handkerchief, my eyes are so weak.'

to my boy! have I a grand child? why, why, Ellen, I never knew that before! but I think it likely.

'Well now give me my chocolate, and then go to your music lesson.' Ellen left him. The old man's heart began to relent, 'well,' he went on, 'Charles was always a good boy; a little wild or so at college, but I indulged him; and he was always good to his old father for all; but he disobeyed me by marrying this poor girl; yet as my old friend and fellow soldier, Tom Bonner, used to say, we ought to forgive and forget.'

'Then you will forgive him?' said Ellen, rushing into the room. 'I think it's likely,' said the old man. Ellen led into the room a beautiful boy about two years old. His curly hair and rosy cheeks could not make one love him.

'What is that?' said the old man wiping his eyes. 'That is Charles, my boy!' said Ellen, throwing one of her arms around her father's neck, while with the other she placed the boy on his knee.

By this time Charles had come. He asked his father's forgiveness, which was freely given and Ellen was almost wild with joy. 'Oh, how happy we shall be!' she exclaimed, and, father, you will love Thomas; and he'll be your pet, won't he?'

TEMPERANCE IN GREAT BRITAIN. We have received an extract of the Albany Daily Advertiser, containing an account of a great temperance meeting in London, on the 25th of February, transmitted to Chancellor Waldworth by the British and Foreign Temperance Society.

It was one of the richest meetings I ever attended. It was held in King-street, St. James', at the west or Court end of the town. A Temperance meeting had never been called in this influential neighborhood, and this served to introduce the subject to the higher ranks of society.

The resolution was seconded by the Bishop of Chester, and adopted. Similar meetings were also held in various parts of England, and several others in London, on the 26th, agreeably to the invitation from this country. About 150,000 British subjects in England, Scotland, Ireland, and the Canadas, are now members of temperance societies, and the cause appears to be making very favourable progress among all classes.

HAPPINESS. Happiness consists not in the possession of gold and silver, diamonds, pearls and precious stones, houses and lands, extensive domains, nor in splendid abilities, transcendent talents, a capacious intellect, a bright understanding, a quick apprehension;—they are sometimes, its very antipodes, producing voluptuousness, covetousness, corroding anxiety, vain glory, vanity, pride, scorn, contempt and vexation. Nor is it found even in the solitary virtues of faith, hope, or of charity. Let the appeal be made to the heart of any individual pos-

We subjoin a part of the remarks of John Wilks, Esq. M. P. on this occasion: They were met that day, he said, and it was delightful to think of it, purely because the great philanthropists of America, throughout the United States, were also met to offer their congratulations to each other, and acknowledge their obligations to their Divine Master.

'The man who I thought was an angel of mercy, but of death. (Hear.) Go to the Cape of Good Hope; there the testimony of Dr. Phillip informs us that gin shops no longer exist. A vast improvement was perceptible in the morals of the people, and the same results were obtained here, which we desire to see accomplished here. (Hear.) At the Sandwich Islands, we found that when some recent navigators proposed to give the natives hogsheads of ardent spirits, the king replied, 'No, we will not accept your present. Break your vessels, and let their contents mingle with the green sea; give them, if you please, to your dogs, but they shall not be drunk by real men.' (Cheers.) Such a sentiment might become the Sovereign who sits on our own imperial throne, and let us hope that it may yet be heard in our own dominions.'

REMARKABLE TENACITY OF LIFE. An old acquaintance of ours, who is fond of relating the remarkable events of his life, gave us not long since, an account of a remarkable instance of the tenacity of life exhibited in a shark which he witnessed during his voyage. A shark, says he, had followed the vessel for some days, when a hook well baited was thrown out, and the shark caught and brought upon deck. His entrails were taken out and the shark thrown overboard again; the entrails were then thrown over also, which he retained them, as they passed through, he caught at and swallowed them a second and third time before he gave up. This is a fact says he for I saw it myself.

ALBANY, N. YORK, April 24. Sagacity of a horse!—An incident occurred, this forenoon, well calculated to excite admiration for that noblest of animals, the Horse. A fine large, dark bay, that is seen daily in our streets attached to Mr. John Taylor's Beer Dray, was standing, this morning, in front of Mr. Fisher's Grocery, in Division street. A load of hay coming up Division, was obstructed by the dray, the man upon his load of hay said 'get out of the way.' The dray-horse, looked round, and seeing that he blocked up the street, moved round the corner of Division, into Green street, and after the wagon had passed, backed his dray round into Division street, and resumed the exact position which he left to enable the wagon to pass. The drayman was not present, no person touched the reins, nor was a word spoken to the horse except by the wagoner, who ordered him to 'get out of the way!'—Journal.
