They are sleeping!—Who are sleeping!
Children, wearied with their play;
For the stars of night are popping,
And the sun hath sunk away; And the sun hath sunk a pay;
As the dew upon the blowms

Blows them on their signder stem,
So, as light as their owe bosoms,
Balmy sleep bath conquered them!
They are sleeping!—Who are sleeping!
Mortals compassed roun! with wo;
Eyelids, wearirs! out with weeping.
Close for every weakness now;
And that short sellef from sorrow,
Harrassed fature shall sustain,
Fill they wake again to-morrow,
Strength-need to contend with pain!
They are sleeping!—Who are sleeping!
Captives in their gloomy cells;
Yet weet dreams are o'er them creeping
With their many coloured spells;
All they love—again they clasp them!
Feel again their long lost jows;
But the haste with which they grasp them,
Every fairy form destroys.

They are sleeping!—Who are sleeping.

Every fairy form destroys.

They are sleeping!—Who are sleeping Misers, by their hoarded gold;
And in face, now are beging Gens only parts of pace on odd;
Golden chains their holds encounter,
Diamon's seem before them stroyal

BURIAL OF JAMES LAWNS. Graiæ gentis decus! The flower of Grecian land!

DEATH OF A NOTORIOUS HOUSEBREAKER. On Saturday last, at an early hour in the morning, James Lawns, a noted 'trackbman' in Westminster, well known to the police, was attacked with the cholera in the street. He was taken home to his lodgings in Union court, Orchard street, and was attended by several medical gentlemen, but without suc-
