

he was accordingly placed in a room, in the third story, overlooking the street. Clough had been permitted to have a candle in his room, in order to enable him to write in the evening. This candle on Sunday night, previous to being visited by Sheriff, he placed in the chimney, and arranged his blanket before it, in such a way as to hide all the beams of the light. An spoon, which he probably found in the room, and which was not known to be in his possession, he had converted into a saw, with which he released himself from his chains. These matters all arranged, when the Sheriff retired, Clough took his candle, and sawed away a portion of a window sill, an ordinary wooden frame—by which he tore away the lattice, making an opening of six inches by ten, through which he escaped, a short time before day break.

His escape was discovered soon after daylight, and the Jail bell being immediately rung a large number of citizens, among them perhaps a few hundred in all, assembled and started in pursuit. Every bar of building in the neighbourhood was searched, and the country for miles round scoured until evening, without success. The pursuit was taken to guard all the outlets, in every direction from the town, so as to reach his capture, soon or later, certain.

Clough was first seen by a colored man in a swamp, on the Rancocas river, about a mile west of Mount Holly. It was at dusk of the evening, and as the fugitive gave an unsatisfactory answer to the terms, he sounded the alarm. The individuals who arrived first were Joel Hollingshead, and Milvine, the latter resident of Mount Holly and well acquainted with Clough. The former denied his name, said he was going to Philadelphia, but allowed himself to be arrested, without offering resistance, though he had an axe in his possession. He had the same dress that he wore in the prison.

On the day previous to his escape, Clough had purchased a pound of crackers. He was found in his possession when arrested. It appears he had secreted himself in a swamp during the whole day, and when he was about pursuing his journey by rail he appeared to be much fatigued with exertions. In the early part of yesterday, he was tracked in the vicinity of the spot where he was afterwards found. He wore spiked pumps, and the course he took from the Jail, was plainly observable in several fields adjoining the town.

considerable anxiety has been caused by the Cholera had exhibited itself in the vicinity of the Warm Springs, we deem it to lay before the public the following extract of a dated.

Warm Springs, 3d July 1833.
The symptoms of Cholera in the Cow pastures have totally disappeared, and the opinion now is, that it was not the cholera which carried off the labourers on the bank. There are nearly three hundred at the White Sulphur, and considerable numbers at the other watering places.

Janes, (man of colour,) admitted—lying in Diamond alley, recently from Ala., 23 years of age, Cholera Asiatica, convalescent.

Lexington, Ky. July 15.
With our knowledge, but seven cases of Cholera have occurred within the city during the last week ending this morning, making, in all, 39 deaths since the commencement (July 11th.)

THE CHOLERA.
Williamsport, Md. July 20.
Cases of cholera among the canal hands are occasionally occurring since our last; but we work may now be said to be quite clear of the disease. Its fluctuations depend very much upon those of the weather, and the care and attention of those to whom it has yet been confined.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.
We learn that an inmate of one of the principal boarding houses in the lower part of Broadway, N. Y. was yesterday morning, covered dead on the floor of his room, and cut his throat with a penknife. The deceased who is about 40 years of age, a gentleman of wealth from the Island of Jamaica, whence he arrived in this city a few days ago, having been induced by his mental suffering occasioned by a recent severe domestic affliction.

CHOLERA.
From Monday, the 8th instant, until Monday the 15th inst. there were 8 deaths of cholera in this city; and from the last named day until Thursday, at 10 o'clock, A. M. one death. The patients for the hospital have all been discharged, and no new applications for three days.

CHOLERA AT SHELBVILLE, TENN.

CHOLERA AT SHELBVILLE, TENN.
A correspondent, who writes us from Shelbyville, under date of Tuesday, July 9, at 10 o'clock A. M. furnishes us the list of deaths by cholera in that afflicted town. 62 whites, 27 blacks—89.

Our correspondent adds—These deaths have occurred in this town since Saturday morning, June 29th and most of them prior to Monday evening, July 1. The disease seems now to be disappearing, though the inhabitants have not yet commenced moving back.—The very few who have remained here from the commencement are in good health, though we have undergone the utmost fatigue and hardship. Indeed there are several men here whose names should be mentioned to the world as the champions of humanity, viz:—Wm. McGee, Thomas Philips, John T. Williams, Dawson Gutarage, David M. Williams, Henry Thompson, Capt. W. B. Watkins, Capt. John Dingstaff and R. Weldon, Esq. They have laid out and buried white and black, male and female, under the most trying circumstances. Some of them have comparatively no interest here, and have been prompted only by the consideration of humanity. Language indeed fails in uttering their praise. Our Doctors who survived deserve much credit. These things are true. I have been an eye witness from the beginning to this moment.

By reference to our obituary head to day, it will be seen that two more of the passengers of the steam-boat Reindeer died of Cholera, in this town, last week. We also learn that another negro woman, belonging to Mr. John Drew, of the Cherokee Nation, died on board of her, of the same disease, after she passed up, in 7 or 8 hours after the attack. This makes nine of the passengers and crew of the Reindeer who have been cut off by this disease since she left New Orleans, or rather since she left Vicksburg, where it is thought it was contracted from passengers taken on board at that place, among whom it first developed itself.

These deaths produced some little alarm among our citizens, at first, but as the disease has not spread, it has entirely subsided, and our town remains as healthy as usual.

CHOLERA.
From Salem, in this state we learn, by a gentleman of this town who passed through that place on Monday last, that the inhabitants had fled to the country with the exception of a few families, and that about forty deaths had occurred. Several of the most respectable citizens of the town were labouring under the disease. The paper in Salem has ceased to be published.—Indiana Democrat.

FOREIGN.
LATER FROM FRANCE.
The packet ship Sully at New York from Havre, brings Paris papers to the 3d June. An extra sheet from the office of the New York Courier, supplies us with the following intelligence:

Under date of the 31st May, the correspondent of the Journal du Havre writes as follows:
It is not without cause that the governments of Germany and Italy fear a general explosion in their respective countries. The administrations there, instead of exerting themselves to allay the general ferment that exists, and acting up to the opinions of the age, seek only, in a system of persecution, the means of suppressing that revolution which is ready to break out. A traveller who has just traversed all the countries bordering on the Rhine, which show the height public discontent has attained. The ideas of independence prevailing among the people, and the peasants, are manifest in the election of members of the liberal party for the legislative bodies now again called together.

The parliamentary opposition expected by the High Diet from this source is considered dangerous, that deliberations have already been held at Frankfurt for the purpose of considering on the means of giving military aid to Baden and Wurtemberg, in case those governments should think it necessary to dissolve the Chambers which are now in session. In that case the Diet will issue a decree, not ordering, it is true, an unlimited suspension of the Constitutional Legislature of the different German states, but giving each government the power to adjourn that action of the national representatives now so much required by the interest of those countries.

The situation of the Italian peninsula appears more precarious even than that of Germany, for, judging by the discontent which prevails in Savoy, a general explosion will shortly take place. In that country, no excuse having yet been found for the introduction of Austrian troops, King Albert has hitherto had to depend on his own resources alone, and he has managed so to displease the army, that a general mutiny has occurred in the Sardinian regiments. In consequence of this military conspiracy numerous arrests have been made without any interference on the part of the people, but the last letters from Chambery and Turin, announce that the inhabitants are in motion, and some citizens have been arrested by the Sardinian officials.—The court of Turin, alarmed by the turn things have taken, would have no objection to receive some Austrian auxiliaries in the country; but the French cabinet were on received information that negotiations were in foot for this purpose, had strongly opposed it and declared that France would send into the Sardinian territory as many troops as they received there from Austria.
