so noble a purpose speaks its own enlogy: You ask me Lady, whence these tears:
When joy and smiles should deck my face, a
Can I have aught but neadless fears,
When so much goodney I retrace. Think not they flow from vaio yegret, Of what was once my happy tot, Ah! No, the kindriess I have met, Makes all my sorrows quite forgot. But grateful frelings awell my breast, And thus with tears my eyes o'erflow; For new in safety, I can rest, And feel no more the keen winds blow. But once, I was a mother's care, g' Her future hope, her promised stay, Forme, she shed the secret tear, For me, she prayed each coming day. Hot sickness struck the fatal blow.
Then came pale "Want," and all ner trai
Not all the care I could bestow,
Brought to my mother health again. Brought to my mother health again.

HIPPOPOTAMUS HUNTING.

Mr. Balt and his party stationed themsalves on a high overhanging rock, which commanded not remained long before a hippopotamus rese to the surface, at a distance of not more than 20 yards. He came up at first very confidently, raising his enormous head out of the water, and snorting violently. At the same instant their guns were discharged, the constant their guns were found burnt to death by approaching too close to the embers.

They for come minutes entertaized sanguine hope that he was killed, and momentarily expected to be his body ascend to the surface. But it soon appeared that a hippopotamus is mit so casily stain—for he rose again, ere long, close to the same spot, and apparently not much concerned at what had happened, though somewhat more cautious than before. They again discharged their pieces, but with as little effect as formerly; and although some of the party continued firing at every one that made his appearance, they were by no means certain that they produced the slightest unpression upon any of them. This they attributed to their having used Leaden balls, which are too soft to enter his almost impensions. Since the treaty with the Party with the Party.
