STEAM BOAT WILLIAM PENN. The undersigned a committee of the Board of Directors of the New Castle & French Town Rail Road Company, having examined into the circumstances connected with the destruction by fire of their fine boat Wm. Penn, on the evening of the 4th inst. which was un fortunately attended with the loss of four lives, submit the following as the result of their investigations:

About half past 5 o'clock on the evening from New Castle, having on board about one hundred and fifty passengers,, and being about one mile this side of Gloucester Point. was discovered to be on fire, the flames burstside of the larboard boiler, near the after end it. The Committee are satisfied that it was communicated to the wood near the boiler by means of a fissure through the sheet i-

Long you will pardon this intrusion at the progress of the forcing pump near the bow of the boat that of the progress was the press of passengers in its vicinity, that it could got be worked, and in the mean time the progress of the fine individuals in board. The tiller rope having been barnet, this was promptly effected by means of a fissure through the viginance of the toring my whom it had been examined two days previously, or which was of still more redent origin.

The work of one of the return flues of the vorkmen, by whom it had been examined two days previously, or which was of still more redent origin.

The wold which first became ignited was unusually are, and therefore burnt with great rapidity, and the combustible nature of the bulk heads, and slight upper deck of the boat, together with a strong westerly wind, aided its progress, so that in a few minutes but little hopes were electratine of being able to save the boat. The efforts of Captain Jeffries, and his crew to do as seem nevertheless, not to have been abated while the slightest chance of success remained. A hole was cut through the upper deck of the save transfer was thrown on the fire, without producing any sensible effect: the hose was rigged to the save and the pr was at his side, manifesting, with singular in telligence, his apprehension and dependence on the aid of Capt. Jeffries. The latter, a length noticed him, and leaving him to the side of the boat said, tiny noble fellow voc must leap this railing or be lost. To the surprise of the captain, the animal appears to understand him, and leaping the rail plu g ed into the river and swam to the shore an
