

amounting, in value to some thousand pounds; and to leave no room for doubt, a bottle was discovered which the medical men instantly pronounced to contain the very identical poison which had caused the death of the unfortunate Thomson. The result is too obvious to need explanation.

The case presents the perhaps unparalleled instance of a man accused of murder, the evidence against whom was so slight as to induce the judge and jury to concur in a verdict of acquittal; but who, persisting in calling a witness to prove his innocence, was, upon the testimony of that very witness, convicted and executed.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE REVEREND PUBLISHER CHARLES CARROLL OF CALVERTON.

Having the honor of the printing in preparation by Mr. Carroll, I have been informed that it is to be published in the Chamber of Delegates. When I see the portrait, which I have the first opportunity, I will endeavor to contribute my thoughts on the subject. It certainly is the portrait of a gifted artist and should it sustain a celebrity he has already acquired, it will doubtless be an ornament to a room where one of the most interesting events recorded in history occurred, the resignation of a successful general of his commission. It is in speaking of these revolutionary worthies, the association between them is so striking, that an allusion to one involves that of the other—the allusion to Mr. Carroll's legislative life, we find that he was ever for wholesome measures, rather than popular acts. Yet, when the liberties of the people were at stake, he was always found arrayed on their side. This is evinced in the different scenes we have described. He was their champion, and defended their rights by the most energetic doctrines. Liberties thus protected from the ruthless hand of power, were preserved unimpaired. The letters of thralldom were severed by that band of patriots, of whom Mr. Carroll was not the least. Though he did not, literally, fight and bleed in freedom's cause, yet he by his wisdom in council, and the amplex of his patrimony, rendered valuable services to his country. It has been bruted that Mr. Carroll delayed signing the Declaration of Independence until the final moment of its completion. Should this be the case, it can, perhaps, be accounted for upon other principles than the motives ascribed to him. The Declaration of Independence was, it appears, but newly agitated, when Mr. Carroll, in conjunction with Bishop, or Archbishop Carroll, Dr. Franklin, and the late honorable Samuel Chase of Baltimore, despatched on an highly important embassy, which was to form a treaty of family, with the Canadian or frontier settlements; or in other language to intercede with them to preserve, during the war about to be waged with violence, a strict neutrality, considering them as the Americans did their brethren. Thus then, we find Mr. Carroll conducting a mission of vital interest to the Colonies. And although he did not succeed with his compatriots in effecting the object for which he was sent, yet it could not have been for want of address and talent, since he possessed both in a happy degree. It must, independent of this, be recollected that it was not Mr. Carroll alone that failed in this enterprise, but likewise his equally talented associates.

CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Friday, April 4, 1834.

The house resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee of Ways and Means on the subject of the Deposites, when

Mr. Mason of Virginia after some brief preliminary remarks, moved the Previous Question.

The question whether that motion was seconded by the house, (which it must be by a majority, or it fails,) the members passed between yeas and nays, and the vote stood as follows: Yeas 114, Nays 105.

So the motion was seconded.

Mr. Selcer rose and called the attention of the house to the 52d rule of order, which forbids a member to vote in a question in which he is personally interested, and stated that several members of the house were stockholders in the Banks which had been referred to.

The Chair decided that no question could be raised on the question of order discussed, the vote on the previous question had been taken inasmuch as the house, by suspending the motion for the previous question, had determined that the question should at once be put.

Mr. Selcer inquired what the main question was?

The Chair replied that it would be on the subject of the resolutions reported by the committee of ways and means.

Mr. Selcer inquired whether, if the previous question should be adopted, it would prevent the yeas and nays on the subject of the resolutions given by the Secretary of the Treasury for the removal of the deposits, insufficient and unsatisfactory.

The Chair replied it would.

Mr. Wilde inquired whether, should the previous question pass, it would be in order to demand a division of the question, so as to have a separate vote on each of the resolutions reported?

The Chair replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Selcer observing that the question was one of great importance, and the hour now late, moved in adjournment, and demanded the yeas and nays. They were ordered and taken, and stood as follows: Yeas 103, Nays 129. So the house refused to adjourn.

Mr. Chilton now moved to lay the first resolution reported by the committee of ways and means on the table.

Mr. Canine having demanded the Yeas and Nays, they were taken, and resulted as follows: Yeas 62, Nays 133.

So the house refused to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. Wilde now made an appeal to the courtesy of the house, and expressed his desire to have the Yeas and Nays on the direct question of the amendment he had offered. Neither he nor his friends wished further debate.

The Chair replied that it would require the unanimous consent of the house.

Mr. Park agreed.

Mr. Selcer demanded the Yeas and Nays on the question, whether Mr. Wilde's request should be granted.

The Chair again stated that it required the unanimous consent of the house, and had been refused.

Mr. Selcer now moved to lay the 2d and 3d resolutions reported by the committee of ways and means upon the table.

Mr. Davenport called for the reading of the resolutions, and they were read.

Mr. Bringer wished the question divided, so as first to take the question on laying the 2d and 3d resolutions on the table.

It was so divided accordingly, and the question being on laying the 2d and 3d resolutions of the committee of ways and means on the table, Mr. Davenport demanded the Yeas and Nays.

They were taken and stood as follows: Yeas 97, Nays 136.

So the house refused to lay these resolutions on the table.

Mr. Wilde asked if it would be in order to move to suspend the rules of the house, so as to obtain a direct vote by Yeas and Nays on his amendment?

The Chair decided in the negative. The nature of the previous question did not depend on the rules of the house, but on the Lex Parliamentaria, and the suspension of the rules would not affect it.

Mr. Adams inquired whether, after the previous question should have been ordered, it applied to all the resolutions, or only to the first.

The Chair said that the question now was, only whether the main question should be put, when the house had decided this, the main question itself would be susceptible of division, so as to get a separate vote on each resolution.

The question then being—shall the main question now be put? (which cuts off the amendments,) the house decided in the affirmative. Yeas 116, Nays 107.

YEAS—Messrs. John Adams, William Allen, Anthony, Bates, Beale, Bean, Bardsley, Beaufort, John Bell, Blair, Booke, Boone, Bouldin, Brown, Bunch, Bynum, Cambreling, Carmichael, Carr, Casey, Chaney, Chinn, Samuel Clark, Clay, Coffey, Coner, Cramer, Day, Dickson, Dickinson, Dunlap, Forester, W. So the house determined that the Main Question should now be put.

The Main Question was then put, viz: viz: shall this house concur with the committee of ways and means in the resolutions reported by them to this house?

Mr. Wilde demanded that the question should be divided, so as to take a vote separately on each resolution.

It was divided accordingly; and put, first, upon concurring in the first of the resolutions reported: viz:

Resolved, That the Bank of the United States ought not to be rechartered.

The question was decided by yeas and nays as follows: Yeas 153, Nays 82.

YEAS—Messrs. John Adams, Wm. So the house concurred in the first resolution.

The second resolution was then read as follows: 2. Resolved, That the public deposits ought not to be restored to the Bank of the United States.

And decided by yeas and nays as follows: Yeas 119, Nays 104.

YEAS—Messrs.
