BANK ROBBERY.

We learn from the Boston papers that the Bank of Norfolk, at Roxbury, Massachusetts, was entered on Tuesday night by means of false keys, and robbed of $27,000 bills, and $2,400 in specie.

000, which they threw aside and left, taking only bills of the old emission. The robbery was discovered early on Wednesday morning, but the locks were left in such condition that they were unable to get the doors open till 12 o'clock, noon.

constructing, afford convenient channels of commerce and intercourse in every part of this vast region.

Several thousand flat-bottom boats convey annually the productions of the various sections of this region to the sea-ports in the southern parts of it, particularly to the great emporium of the West, the city of New Orleans.

With these facts before us—and facts they are—we may safely indulge in pleasing anticipations of the growing greatness of our nation.

WHORLEBERRY FROLIC AT LEXINGTON.

We ought to have been at Lexington on Saturday. We learn from a friend, who was so happy as to be of the party, that they had a glorious frolic there.

The most conspicuous vehicle arrangement was a hay-cart converted into an omnibus, and ingeniously decorated with flags and evergreens, fantastically and beautifully arranged.

There was another everlastingly great and almighty capacious affair, which was called the Earthquake, but whether from the rumbling of the wheels without, or the clatter of the tongues within, the deponent saith not.

At its conclusion, the baskets which contained the fruit of the afternoon's frolic, were arranged on the tables and sold by an anaemic girl purring her sylvan-like voice through the thick foliage.

VANE, THE STEAM BOAT ROBBER.

Perhaps a greater sorcery than this man never existed, as the following brief sketch of his life will show. He was born in Lancashire, England, in the year 1776, of poor but honest parents.

His next essay was to seduce a farmer's daughter, and when she became enceinte by him, he gave her corrosive sublimate, with a view to produce abortion, and caused her death.

communicate all the information in their power on a subject of such deep importance to the community.

During the last week, various reports were related of the existence of Cholera in our city. The attention of the authorities was invited immediately directed to an investigation of the facts.

In the exception mentioned, three individuals died in one hour, but the attending circumstances, the habits, occupation, and situation of the sufferers were such as to prevent either surprise or alarm at the result.

The following particulars we take from Journal of this morning. A young man by the name of Stephen...
