'True,' said he I have test and a sure one: and he reached a ease troun the lockers: from which he drew a brace of pistols and very deliberaterly began to load them.

'What would you do?' I exclaimed.—surely upon such alight grounds, you would not be alarmed,' said he, interrupting me. I shall do nothing rash, and he coolly examined the flint. Having loaded and primed the weapons—'Call down Quaco, and all the crew.'

They came into the cabin. The cook was called forward, and the crew through around

Satisfied with this discovery, we returned to the cabin, where we found the youth who had warned us in the first instance on his knees, returning thanks to Providence for having been the means of SUMMARY JUSTICE.

The following incident is sketched with great spirit, and is highly interesting. It is from an English Magazine:

We had a negro on board of a very sullen and repulsive aspect, who bore the cognomen of Quico. He belonged to the Captain of the schoner, who had treated him with great kindness, and cured him of that scourge of the African called malo'estomic, caused by eating carth. That his cure might be completed, his humane master brought him up the Quico with us, and as he had been accused.

We take pleasure in stating that the suggestion, which we a few weeks ago threw out -of daslang a bucket of colorwater in the tace of a person striken by highting, might have the effect, as it did in one instance which came under our win observation, to project a young lady in South ough, Miss the daughter of Capt. H. B. W. color. This remedy was applied, and see was restored to respiration, and with medical aid to health.

LOVE AND ROMANCE.

A greater monor of young girls, between the age of fifteen and eighteen, and of young men between eighteen and twenty-four, fail wetims to what they call love, than to any other particular class of disease-and more particularly to England and Ireland, than in any other country on earth. This is from the force of early impressions peculiar to those countries, and of comparatively recent growth, the effect produced by a certain class of rothe effect produced by a certain class of ro-mance writers.—These writers give an obli-quity to the young mind which leads to de-struction. Scarcely has a young girl land down her heading male Easy, when she becomes a subscriber to some trashy library, and the hours which, in the country, or in a and the nours which, in the country, or in a land where education is unknown, they would employ in jumping about in the open air, are now consumed with intensity of thought up-on the mandlin miseries of some hapless ke-roine of romance, the abortion of a diseased roine of romance, the abortion of a diseased brain. Her imitativeness, as Spurzheim would phrenologically observe, becomes developed, and she fixes on her favourite heroine, whom she apes in every thing—sighing for her sorrow, and moaning to be as miserable. She fixes immediately upon some figure of a man, some Edwin or Edgar, or Ethelbert, which she thinks will harmonize with the horrors of the picture, and she theo enjoys her tears and her tortures to her heart's satisfaction.—Languor, inaction, late hours, late rising, and incessant sighing, derange her digestion—paleguor, inaction, face nouse, face ring, one cassant sighing, derange her digestion—paleness, loss of appetite, and general debility follow; the cause continues, the effects increase, ward to assist the wretched man. Whether and hectic fever puts an end to the romance.
