nanated by the editor) and that it was a mea-sure of that party, or the Jackson party. To to late such an unfounded and illiperal charge, of the above. I deem it only necessary to say, that I know of the existence of no such cabinet, and I am, perhaps, as little known to Mr. Blair as the honourable editor of that paper; but I be lieve him to be possessed of principles too democratic, and too much of a gentleman, to attempt to influence any person is his em-ployment to promote any political end. I should have thought the editor of the Republican knew me too well to suppose that I could be made an instrument in the hands of any man to further such an object; and I could have cherished the idea, that, from the repeated professions of friendship from him, he would have been the last man thus, in my ab sence, to injure, me by a species of detraction, which I could not personally have an opportunity of repelling. But need it be won-

They had also built confirm the who are now see but the active instruments of this faction calling a meeting of another party of young men of the city, to endeavour to reclaim those who are opposed to the caucus nominated ticket? I warn the young men to nominated ticket? I warn the young men to turn a deaf ear to the wiles and subtleties of our community? Does it not argue the weakness of the cause in which they are endeaded to the caucus of the cause in which they are endeaded to the cause of the cause in which they are endeaded to the cause of the cause in which they are endeaded to the cause of the climate to be excontent. Those writers, be they whom they may, their enemies—to pursue their course with the enemies—to pursue the calcalated to call to their aid the virtuous native dwellings for themselves, and had the country.

They ha already obtained: for it is a combat of principle against interest, and justice with tyranmy: And should they finally be defeated, they will enjoy the pleasing consolation that they encountered their enemy manfully, saved their principles, and their victors gained in the principles, and their victors gained in the monor. I would ware them against the many attempts now making through the columns of the Republican, to distract their ranks. Let them consider the persons who would attempt to occer them from their purpose by such a trade of metapones, and such a quantity of political garbiage, as fit instruments only to arry out the edicts of this political hierarchy, and not to man a political creed for a body of all garened men. I conjure them to tain a region to keep them in notice.
