The counsel on both sides entered into long arguments on the case; the counsel for the slave arguing that the women could not be taken as the name of Culbrath was misspelt in the warrunt; after sometime the Hon. Caleb Johnson vs. Locker Kinderdine et alias -- Histrict Court of the United States. Preand Julger Boldwin and Hopkinson. The attention of the District Court of the

. States, has recently been engaged in the trial of a suit growing out of the apprehension of a runaway about, by his owner. The substance of the evidence, detailed by the witnesses, is as

In the year 1902 a party of four citizens of New J. rs.y, came into the State of Pennsylva-nia, and took from the service of the person with whom he was then living, a black slave, named Jack, whom they alleged had absconded from one of the party some time pr viously, and and after in maching him, placed him in a decrporn, with the supposed intention of training him from the bounds of this commonwealth. On their way from the house, they were assaul-ted by a multitude, heared by Mr. Isachar Kinderdine (the in lividual with whom the slave was living at the time,) and having been seriously injure i from missiles thrown by this mob, the party in the wagon were compelled to stop in consequence of a blow received on the head, by Caleb Johnson, the master of the negrothe slave taken from their passe cion-the gentlemen who had come in rely to reclaim their property, were taken into 'custody, and th plaintiff in this suit committed to the jail at Vorristown, to answer to the charge of felony, before the proper county court. His trial took place accordingly, and he was honourably ac-

On these grounds Calch Johnson has brought an action of damages against Isachar Kinderdine et alias, who participated in the violence, before stated to have been done to his person. The claimant prosecutes this cause under an act of Congress, passed to assist masters in the recovery of their runaway slaves, and demands as a recompense to himself, damages in the sum of $10,000.

The charge of Justice Baldwin, was eloquent and conclusive, and afforded a striking commentary, on the recklessness of those who assert that the North is interfering with the peculiar property of the South: he expressly informed the jury, that a master has the right of arrest ing his slave, without a warrant, and carrying him before any competent tribunal, in order to prove his property; that he is not required to answer the questions of any one, except those of the legal magistrates, and that parol evidence is sufficient to show the validity of his claims in the absence of a bill of sale. His address was adverse to the defendants, and should be spread widely, for it would have a powerful influence in allaying the fears of one section of the country on this subject.—The Jury gave a verdict for plaintiff, and awarded damages at $4000.
