Mr. Dulany was listened to with profou attention by the house. It was I believe his first speech this session, and furnishes the assurance, that he is a young man of sound and discriminating mind, and ready as a debater.—He does credit to the constituents who sent him here, and to the state at large. It is hoped that Mr. D. will take a more active part in the debates of the house than he has done. His timidity has heretofore deterred him; but as the ice is now broken, as he has made vourable impression upon the mind of every one who heard him, it is confidently expected that he will take a prominent part in the future debates of the house.

THE TEMPTATION.

O' would you see Man in his majesty of birth
The living likeness of the King of Kings.
Treading in native dignity the sinless Earth,
The unfallen Emperor of all created things,
Behold him here! with limb of matchless mould,
And proud sublimity of form, grand yet not stern,
And brow, whose marble srch seems strained to hold
The weight of mighty thoughts and doubts that bur
Thro' his dark eye that looks immovably to Heaven!
His clinch'd foot crisps the softmose; whence this?
Ah! tis the temptation! To his hand is given

The justice of the following rement on the opinion entertained in Europe of our Nevy, will be recognized by all Americans who have been even for a short time, on the Custinent. Never in the history of the world did a natural attains at so little cost of blood, so high a position in the estimation of the world as a termidable so-tagonist, as the United States did by her naval victories in the short war with Great. British. British supremacy on the ocean, established by repeated triumphs, was the chief source of the despairing envy of her European rivals as well as of her predominating influence. A sation, therefore, that in frequent trials, showed its ability to resist, that supremecy, was hailed in Europe not only with admiration but with a feel-Front the Bultimore America rope not only with admiration but with a feel-ing of gratitude. An American abroad is re-spected as the countryman of Washington and Franklin, as the citizen of ; great republic, as a man who acknowledges no superior in a king or s lord; but his chief title to honour and respect is, that he is one of a nation that beat the English at sea. And on none has a deeper im-pression been made by our naval feats than on our great adversary herself. The national feel. ing on this point is fully conveyed in an exclamation of an old veteran British tar. He was looking with longing eyes on some cured beef— far better than he had been accustomed to—that had just been landed on a London wharf from an American vessel, and on being told that it was of the same quality as that with which A. merican men of war are stored, he exclaimed

No wonder they fight so like devils!" "From the comparisons I have made between our own and the ships of war of other nations, I think we may well be proud of our navy. I had learned in Europe, long before joining the United States,' that the respect we exact from foreigners is paid more to America afloat, than to a continent they think as far off at least as the moon. They see our men-of-war, and they know very well what they have done, and from two o'clock, found his office, which was on the the appearance and character of our officers second story, completely enveloped in the the appearance and character of our officers what they might do again-and there is a tangibility in the deductions of knowledge and eyesight, which beats books and statistics. I have have heard Englishmen deny, one by one, every claim we have to political and moral superior ty, but I have found no one illiberal enough to refuse a compliment, and a handsome one too to Yankee ships.'

DESTRUCTION OF THE ATHENÆUM. In the Patriot of Saturday, we had but a mo nent's time before going to press, to announce the distruction of this building by fire. The following particulars of this unfortunate event we om the American of this morning.

This elegant building, we regret to state, wa destroyed by fire on Saturday last. The chiannevs and blackened walls are standing, but all within is now a mass of smoking ruins. have taken no little pains to ascertain how, and precisely in what part of this extensive edifice, the fire originated, but without being able to gain any positive information on these points. labours. When the alarm was first given, about an hour before noon; the fire was seen bursting through the windows of the third story near the western end. A gentleman who was in his office in the second story, immediately beneath, informs us that the first object which met his eyes on hearing the alarm, was the appearance of the fire breaking from the story above, as we have already mentioned. It is evident, therefore that the fire must have been burning in the third story for some time, to have gained such great headway when discovered. The flames rose to the fourth story and afterwards to the roof, and a strong wind from the north-west car ried them rapidly to the eastern and southern parts of the edifice. At this period of time the appearance of the conflagration was truly fear-ful; the destruction of the Athenaum was from the first seen to be inevitable—its lofty walls the high wind, the intense cold, and the shortness of the supply of water, all combining to rende unavailing the efforts which were made to pre vent it-but serious apprehensions were felt that the surrounding property might be involved in a common ruin. Large flakes of fire were waft. ted to the roofs of the adjacent houses, and in two or three cases had actually communicated to the shingles, but they were immediately discov ered and extinguished. The dwellings of Wm. J. Ward and Solomon Betts, Esq. immediately south of the Athenæum, and the Masonic Hall were in imminent danger from this cause, bu were happily saved from damage by the watchfulness and activity of the firemen. The dwell ing houses on the north side of Lexington st. directly opposite the Athenæum, were preserved by the force and direction of the wind. Their roofs and fronts were also kept wet by judicious and examine. applications of water from the engines stationed in that quarter, The gradual destruction of the roof and at tic of the Athenseum in the same degree cir-cumscribed the action of the flames within its walls, and diminished the danger of spreading The fire was thus happily confined to the premises in which it originated, but the devastation there was complete. Fromthe roof down to the floors of the besoment, the flames have devour ed every thing combustible. The offices of the attorneys in the basement and second storie attorneys in the basement and second stories were all cleared of their books, papers and other contents before the fire reached them. Except the damages incident to so hasty a removal, it is believed that the gentlemen of the bar have escaped without loss. In the third and fourth stories, however, the loss has been extensive and heavy. The particulars, as well as we were able to gather them hastily on Saturday, are as flows: In the fourth story were the rooms by the Maryland Academy of Arts and Sciences. In these were arranged, in costly and elegant cases and fixtures, valuable and interesting ca-binets of minerals, shalls insects, birds, and o imens of Natural History - a collection of fifteen years formation. There was also a. Library of costly works, not so valuable for its extent as for its interest and fitness for the purpose for wince it is consumed, was among them.

Added to these was an extensive collection of phrenological casts, imported from Edinburgh, comprising the heads of several hundred celebrated individuals. We learn that the property of the Academy was insured, But the le nany respects, is one which money cannot easi.

The Baltimore Lycum Library was in the third story. We are informed that this institution had recently purchased the collection of books which was formerly known as the Athenæum Library. Here, we believe, there was nothing saved.

On the same floor were the Lecturing Hall and Library of the Maryland Institute, and a valuable philosophical apparatus—nothing of which was saved.

The Young Men's Society also occupied room or two in the building, and it is said their loss in books is several hundred dollars. The elegant Musical Saloon, so frequently used on public occasions, was the last of the upper rooms destroyed. The framed work which formed its arched and beauttful ornamented ceiling added, for a time, new vigor to the flames The few moveable articles it contained were saved, but there was no time afforded to take down an excellent organ belonging to Mr. R. Shaw, teacher of psalmody, and it was consequently involved in general destruction.-We learn that there is a policy of insurance on the organ for $1900, which does not, however, cover its va-

The severest individual loss we apprehend will fall on Mr. STAVELY, an architect of much merit. Mr. S. had occasion to go out of town on Saturday morning and not returning until flames. Besides many valuable architectual and engineering instruments, all his drawings and plans were consumed-a loss in which w can the more strongly sympathize from having from personal inspection. The calamity is to him a most serious one, as besides the intrinsic value of his instruments and papers, they constituted nearly the whole of his wealth.

The Athenœum Building is insured in the E. quitable Society's office for $20,000 and we hear that there are polices for $10,000 each, in two other offices.

The firemen had a most severe duty to per form at those two conflagrations, in consequence of the intenseness of the cold. They themselves and all their apparatus were inveloped in coats of ice, during the whole of the protracted and arduous period of their praiseworthy exertions. The sentiment of the city is warm and decided in praise of the admirable manner in which they went through their extraordinary
