CHINESE PROCLAMATION.

The following is a Proclamation of one of the Emperors of China, when he arrived at the ago of three score and ten:

"I will, that one child or relation of every man aged seventy, be exempted from road work and military service, in order that an old man may always have somebody to wait upon him. I give to every man aged eighty, o silk, a pound of cotton, ten bushels of rice, and ten pounds of meat. The old men from eighty o one hundred, must receive the double of this; but those of one hundred I must be acquainted with myself, and scatter upon them, with my own hands, the blessings I intend them."

A banker at Paris, returning home some eve ings ago, from a ball, missed three things—his wife, his cashier, and the contents of his strong box. Having by some means' ascertained that the figitives were gone to Havre, he immediately followed them, and arrived at the Hotel in which they had taken up their abode, where he were to sail the next day for 'A. learned they were to sail the next day for A-merica. Making a confident of the landlord, the banker went to the chamber in which the two culprits were. At the first summons the recreant cashier opened the door; and, throwrecreant cashier opened the door; and, throw, ing himself at the feet of his injured benefactor, acknowledged his criminality, and only supplicated merey for his guilty companion, who lay trembling in the hed which he had just quitted. Against it you will have all the Carlists; to culturrass the Government and trust to the chapter of accidents is their play. To such an extent is this carried th a Berryer and Fitzjaines declare they have documents which trey will not produce till the discussion comes on; they can have none of any authority, for all are lefore the Chambers this month back, and if Brogle had read the papers himself he could have answered Berryer triumphantly, not have sunk before him as he did in April last; - beat, the Republicans, they are few, they will join the Cariists with the same objects to emburrass the Government; -r.cxt, all whom considerations from across the channel influence, every thing has been put says the Constitutionnel, is now attached to the Do tion. The fleets of both countries will work our will upon each other, and for the next twenty years will not be formidable to us, will not dare mutter; America will not be in a state to assert her neutral docrines, nor to resist our orders in council should a war be neglected, besides neither country for many years will be able to get their fair proportion of trade even af-ter a peace. We do not fear France but America, America we must throw her and her commerce and her big ships back if we can." This is ----, and I supto he is right in his way. The organization of the French Ministry is complete. The following is the official arrange-ment, as published in the Moniteur of the 13th:

The Duc De Broglie is Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in place of De Rigny-and President o the Council, in place of the Duc de Trevise. Marshall Maison, now Minister at St Peters

were drawn up on the heights along the whole terim.

Messrs. Humann, Thiers, Guizot, Dupin Persil, and Duchatel, keep their offices.

It seems that considerable difficulty existed n bringing about this arrangement. M. Thiers, at one time, was ready to throw up his office and was waited upon by about two hundred members of the Chamber of Deputies, assuring him of the desire of a majority in that body that he should retain office.

Nothing new on the subject of the Indemni-ty Bills. The subject was still in the hands of a Committee. The revolution in the Ministry was considered favourable to the American claims rather than otherwise. There is bu ne opinion expressed by the passengers or let ters by the Charlemagne, lt is, that the bill will pass. A letter from Paris says that the Onke de Broglie refused to accept the position in the Ministry which he holds until it had been scertained beyond all doubt that the American Indemnity full would pass; and that to satisfy him, the opinions of the members of the Chamwere specially enquired after and counted

In a letter from Toulon, of Marfind it mentioned that the assembling ron of the United States, at Port Mahon had awakened some simpleions, and that the French frigate Bellons, had been despatched to watch their movements, and to remain off Mahon until our squadron had departed.

The concentration of our vessels of wa onsidered a menace, and some inquietude is thereby produced among commercial men. The Americans (says the letter) say they expect more vessels.

An important debate on the late changes in the ministry, took place in the Chambers March 15th. M. Mauguin commenced by demanding explanations. M. Thiers to reconcile him to Broglie and Guizot, is said to have been copied from the deputation of the English Commons in the case of Lord Althorp.

In the course of the debate on the ministers, March 15, M. Mauguin complained that the chief of the etat major and tirree colonels of the National Guard had assisted at the Fulchiron meeting .- Gen. Jacqueminot, who was the leader in this caucus, said they did not act as National Guards.

M. Guizot made a brilliant speech in favor amnesty. The Journal des Debats says, if the American treaty is not accepted, the Duke of Broglie and ex-

The Courier Francais states that certain familiars of the Tuilleries have circulated a report that it is in contemplation to multiply the ministerial departements, ac cording to the system in England, thus opening to the ambition of the subordinate doctrinaires some secondary appointments, until a favorable opportunity arrives to place them in higher offices - Gatiguant, March 14.
