

indiscretions and the fanaticism of its friends. It was in view of this spirit of ultram that one of the distinguished orators at the recent religious anniversary, shrewdly remarked that often, when a good cause has been begun, if the devil finds there is no other way to ruin it, he will turn charioteer himself. No stronger illustration of the truth of this remark could well be added than is to be found in the recent measures and proceedings of some good men, who are labouring with more zeal than prudence, or knowledge of human nature, in the temperance cause. Not only have we seen the cutting down of orchards, and the pouring of wine into the streets, but grave and revered divines are at length, in the exuberance of their zeal, proposing to abolish with the solemn institution of the Eucharist!

In the solemn affairs of religion, moreover, instead of looking into our own hearts, and repenting of our own sins, we are striving to look into the hearts of others, and take care of them, in our own way, and to the danger, we fear, of our own souls. The appointed means of grace are contemned; we wish to do the work of the Spirit, as it were, by machinery, and instead of depending upon the Spirit of God, and seeking to catch the genial currents of that wind which bloweth where it listeth, and of which we only hear the sound, but cannot tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth, we are striving to raise hurricanes ourselves. But, unless the wind is greatly deceived in his estimate of the facts, detailed in the present volume, they ought to stand as a solemn warning against the indulgence of this ultra, self-righteous, and fanatical spirit; this seeking out of human inventions in matters of such high concernment as those of the salvation of men. How much wiser, safer, and better, than the running after every new thing, and the following of so many blind guides, would it be for Christian professors to obey the injunction of God himself: 'Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein; and ye shall find rest for your souls.'

From the Mobile Register. THE FATE OF MRS. ALSTON. I have for some time observed an article going the rounds of the newspapers, in relation to the mysterious death of Mrs. Alston, the daughter of Col. Aaron Burr, taken from the Alabama Journal. This article, although true in many particulars, nevertheless contains several errors. I suppose it grew out of a casual conversation I held in Mr. Smith's Book Store, in Mobile, some six months since, and as Mr. Smith was very busy at the moment, several gentlemen being in the store, he probably misunderstood me in my statement,—at as to time, and as to the receiving the confessions of the pirate, either personally or by a physician. The article was also wrong in many particulars, as the statement itself will show. I do not charge any one with wilful exaggeration or misstatement; nor holding it more liable to occur, than for a story to undergo trivial modifications, by frequent repetitions from one individual to another. It is well known under what circumstances Mrs. Alston left South Carolina. Whether she was the only daughter, I know not, but one thing was evident, never did a father love a daughter or a daughter a parent, with more fervor and devotion than they did. She quit Carolina, and embarked at Charleston, with all her effects consisting principally of plate, to join him in New York. She sailed, and was heard of no more for years. It is said, her loss afflicted her father more severely than all his political troubles and adversities. For some years after, she was in the hands of pirates, and in his last letter to Gen. Wilkinson, written at the most important crisis of his life, says he, "I will be in such a time," and my daughter will soon follow."

General Serra made to the assemblage a spirited appeal, the more impressive from the character of the speaker, who, after a half century of public service, now came forward in his eighty-third year to lead his townsmen in their determination to vindicate the authority of the law and defend their persons and property. The multitude assembled were requested to organize themselves in their respective wards, and re-assemble at the City Hall at six o'clock. This was efficiently done, and before night the various bodies were well armed and distributed over the city, through which they patrolled during the whole night.

Regrets for what is passed are idle. The town has learnt a lesson from the doings of the last few days that will never be forgotten. Feelings which should ever animate the governing power, particularly in a republic,—a willingness to preserve peace by peaceful means and a reluctance to proceed to the last extremity, fatally misled the city authorities last week. These dispositions diverted them from the adoption of the only means of effecting their object. Had the force which assembled on Saturday to keep peace been, as it was on Monday, organized as an armed force, not only would the designs of the violently disposed have been frustrated, but bloodshed would certainly have been prevented. Such a manifestation of power and resolution would have deterred them, and preserved the city from the horrors of the last few days.

The following Order was issued early yesterday morning by Gen. J. S. Serra: THIRD DIVISION OF MARYLAND MILITIA. Head Quarters, City Hall, 11th August, 1835. The Major General of this Division of the Maryland Militia having received a requisition from the civil authority to call out such part of the Military force under his command, as he might deem sufficient to preserve the public peace, immediately appealed to his fellow citizens for that aid, and it is with great pleasure he announces that they promptly volunteered in such numbers as to assure the public tranquility, and to give this community the most gratifying evidence that kind feelings and good order are restored throughout the city.

The officers and men of the Third Division will parade this day at 5 o'clock P. M. and report themselves to head quarters, as also the volunteer citizens who so patriotically enrolled themselves and did duty on yesterday; but if their services should be wanted at an earlier hour, they will assemble and repair to head quarters at the discharge of three o'clock, to be fired in succession. JOHN SPEAR SMITH, Major General.

The foregoing Order is also designed to have effect this day, August 12th, and the citizens are requested to govern themselves accordingly.

The Major General thinks proper to submit hereto the requisition of the Mayor, and the law which authorizes the requisition. To Major General John Spear Smith commanding the Third Division of Maryland Militia. The undersigned states to General Smith, that he has good reason to believe that the peace and quiet of the State is likely to be endangered by an opposition to the laws, and that military aid is necessary to suppress or prevent the same, and therefore requires the militia under his command to be ordered out. A. MILTENBERGER, Mayor of Baltimore. Baltimore, Aug. 10, 1835.

Another strong indication of selling a Capital, occurred at this office. It is true that Nos. 42 48 55 only drew a Prize of $50 in the Maryland State Lottery, Class No. 16—whilst Nos. 11 48 55 was entitled to $10,000!!! This is only mentioned that persons may judge for themselves, and try if they please in the following splendid scheme. CAPITAL $20,000. 25-PRIZES OF $1,000!

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Baltimore, Aug. 9, 1835. I appeal to my fellow citizens, to stay the hands of violence, and prevent a repetition of the events of the last night. Called by your own whole official career, and up to the present hour, I have deeply deplored the use of the FORCE OF REASON and THE UNDOING HAND OF LAW. I have deeply deplored the resort to deadly weapons, AGAINST MY FELLOW CITIZENS, and I have deplored the use of violence, and the destruction of property. I have deplored the use of force, and the destruction of property, and I have deplored the use of force, and the destruction of property.

JESSE HUNT, Mayor. The assaultants kept undisputed possession of the house until between two and three o'clock on Sunday morning, when a small body of citizens, armed with muskets, marched to the place, and cleared the house. While the detachment was on its way to the watch-house, a violent assault was made on Lexington, near Charles street, with stones and bricks, which was returned by a volley of musketry. Two of the assaultants, it is said, were shot down.

The different stations where guards were posted to prevent access to the square were more or less, frequently the scene of alarm, and with the discharge of fire arms, and the shouts of the multitude, and the rapid advance of the watch-house on North street, the receptacle for the prisoners was the scene of incessant din and commotion; during one of the letters, which occurred about two in the morning, a man was lasked with a pistol. At day break on Sunday morning, the prisoners, fifty-five in number, were conveyed to the watch-house. It is proper to add to the above account, no other arms than the sticks were used, or acted as guards to preserve the peace of the city, until after eight or ten of them had been severely wounded by stones and bricks thrown by those who were attempting to pass from the more direct North Calvert street to the square in front of Johnson's house. It is hoped that the pavement in Baltimore street, near Calvert, had been raised for the purpose of repairing, and a pile of several thousand bricks in the corner where a house was erecting, furnished a convenient magazine of missiles, which were showered by the rioters with unsparring facility on the unarmed citizens assembled to support the laws. A bullet was also fired on one of the assaulting mob, which wounded one of the civil officers.
