CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 21.

STEAMBOAT CATASTROPHE.

We are under the p. inful necessity of recording a steamboat explosion upon our waters, which resulted in the loss of four human lives. The new boat Commodore Perry, on her passage from Detroit, and within fre or six miles of that places burs tone of her boilers, which resulted in the catastrophe already mentioned. It is stated in the Heredd of this morning, that of the lives lost, one was an individual of the name of MaxSeld, who was at the time sick, and in the cook's room; and two cooks. The fourth individual whose name we have not learned, juneal overboard and was drowned.

We do not learn that any others were seriously injured, although there were 50 or 60 passengers on board. The Com. Perry was towed into our harbour by the Daniel Webster. She appears to be considerably injured, but not so seriously to prevent her being speedily repaired.

There have been reports in town that the Michigan which we have already stated, was run aground near the mouth of Detroit river, had gone to pieces; but this is contradicted and supposed not to be true. Fears have also been entertained of the fate of the Sandasky, which has not been heard from since the slight acci-dent on passing out of our harbor, which we mentioned last Friday.

MATTHIAS THE PROPHET.

Isabella Van Wagganer es. B. B. Folger.— This was an action for slander. It was a case that was expected would develope some farther particulars with regard to the enormities of the impostor, Matthias. There was, however, no defence offered on the part of the defendant. Mr. Western, the counsel for the plaintiff, in a very neat and appropriate speech, detailed the particulars as set forth in the declaration, which med to charged the defendant with saying that the plaintiff had attempted to poison him and the whole of his family. Evidence was produced, which substantially if not literally proved the averments of the declaration. On the part of he defendant, Mr. Waceler, his counsel, stated by waying mitigation of the damages, that he reserve to inform the jury, that his client had been in the judge charged the judge charged the judge charged the judge charged the judge that this case, was one of a judge charged that this case, was one of a judge of the great succession of the trial of Matthias, and that this custom of the trial of Matthias, and that this doubt be taken into serious consideration by de jury; the plaintiff was an humbla coloured woman and with a charge like this preferred aiss her, and disseminated so publicly as it neensi her, and disseminated so publicly as it ne-estrily had been, was the more fatal to her re-strion. He concluded his charge, by leaving to the jury to say what amount of damages to be plainfil was entitled to. The jury retired,
