FROM THE SOUTH. By the steam packet South Carolina, Capt

Coffey, we have received the Chaleston papers of Friday-they contain no recent intelligence from Florida.

Gen. Jesup and suite arrived at St. Augustine on the 6th inst. The General had been to Vo lusia and examined several sites, with a view to establish a post in a healthy position on the St. John's river. It was understood that he had in contemplation a post at Silver Spring, on Lake George, about 25 miles north of Volusia. His May in St. Augustine was expected to be short.

A correspondent of the Charleston Mercury writing from St. Augustine, says

"It is contemplated to establish a post at the mouth of Moultrie Creek, about five miles south of this city, and by means of videttes to keep up a constant communication by way of Thompson's and Weedman's to Picolata, this will afford complete protection to the remaining plan-tations south and east of the St. John's river. Two companies are to be raised for local protection in this city, and a horse company be mustered into service for the protection of the Mandarin settlement. There are at present Artillery; they have something like 200 men on the sick list unfit for duty. The men generally, look worn out and unfit for service.

The ore a debt to England of Forty millions—our first duty is to pay it—the honour of the nation demands it."—This is a text from which the Whig leaders, from Mr. Biddle down, have been preaching for the last month; and two or three prints have made our incredulity months. other ingredients than sound logic and gentle.

well, let us understand each other. We deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation owes her a dollar; we deny that the nation of the national faith, or the national honour, is involved in any such way. We deny your facts by our premises—not the moral duty which the conclusion would involve, if the premises were the all lines and the nation of the national faith, or the national duty which the conclusion would involve, if the premises were and was stolen from thence on the afternoon of the Bd inst. while all hands were on board, and this country—perhaps most of them American no clue to the robbery could be obtained. Goand manufacturers goods to the amount of forty millions more than they have paid for-very possible more than they are able to pay for.—
But these are transactions between individuals; the individual debtors are liable, each to his individual creditor. We as a people in our collective capacity—as a nation in our political character, have just exactly nothing to do with it. If we have bought any portion of these goods of our own merchants, we have paid for were subjects of mutual gratification.

We are now enabled, through the kindness of the French Consul General here, M. de la do with it. This is our view of the case—this to be controverted.

But suppose we look a little further into this ase. This forty millions of debt is the aggregate amount of inaviduals debts, incurred by individuals for their own benefit. Take a case:

—one hundred thousand dollars of it has been incurred by A. B. a New York merchant—he interrogatories. They then commenced search, bought the goods on credit in Liverpool, brought and after some time found his dead body a short them to New York, sold them and received the money—spent twenty thousand dollars of it in brush! After this discovery, the elder boy conextravagant living and invested the balance in fessed that he had shot his brother purposely, worthless lands or stocks. Pay-day has come with a gun which was left loaded in the house, —and he has nothing to pay—according to the dragged him to the place where he was found, Whig doctrine, "We' are bound in honour and and covered him with brush! he then returned honesty to pay this debt. B., who is not worth in regard to the heart of man.—The heart is dea hundred dollars, to pay a hundred thousand? ceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; That's the question. If gold was piled up knee who can know it?" deep in our streets, and belonged to others, how is he to get it to pay his debt? He has nothing to give in exchange for it. Will the Whig fi-nancier explain this! Perhaps they can tell us what kind of a currency will enable a man, who is not worth a dollar, to pay debts to the amount of a hundred thousand. The credit system will do! Yes, it will borrow the money in this country, and pay it in England-but, if "we' are bound to set up that system for such a purpose, then it amounts to this: that "we" are to stand as indorsers to all the merchants and speculators in the country. . Our only objection to this is-that "we" have not agreed to any such bargain. If the Whiga controvert this, let us the contract. The whole thing is supremely and ridiculously absurd .- Trenton Empo-
