That on the same day one of my boats, manned by British subjects, passing along the American shore, and without any couse being given, was fired upon from the American side near Fort Schlosser, by cannon,

"I have also before me the most positive information that a steamboat, called the Caroline, was sold to the pirates on Navy Island, and Manlsby, the house took up loaded with provisions and munitions of war, report submitted by him not only within your country, but immediately under the notice of the authorities of the United of the Executive of Ponn. In the course of further conversation upon the subject, he observed, that in the event of an invasion of that, or any other portion of our Territory, by any individual in arms from Upper Canada, he desired it to be distinctly understood, that such individual shall be deemed an outlaw, and dealt with accordingly."

General Rensselaer Van Rensselaer, at Navy Island, writes a reply to a similar letter of Mr. logers, in which he thus expresses himself:

"In answer, I have to say it never was my intention to send any armed force to Grand Island. or any other part of the United States. On the contraryal have been so fully satisfied that soil would be held secred by both beliigerent parties, that I had not even made any preparations for defence against that quarter until yesterday morning, when it was reported to me that an armed force of the enemy supposed to be 100 strong was seen there about daylight.
