ON LOW SPIRITS.

Los spirits in a certain state of the mind, accompanied by indig ation, wherein the greatest evils are apprehended upon the slightest grounds, and the worst consequences imagined. Ancient medical writers supposed this diseant to be confined to those particular regions of the abdomen technically called hypochondria, which are situated on the right or left side of that cavity, whence comes the name hypochondriasis.

Symptoms. The common corporeal symptoms are, flatherly in the stonach or bowds, acrid cructations, costinences, spannodic pains and often an utter inability of fixing the attention upon any subject of importance or engaging in any thing that demands vigour or corners. Also languidness—the mind becomes intake, thoughtful, desponding, melancholy and dejected, accompanied by a total derangement of the nervous system. The mental feelings and peculiar train of ideas that hunt the imagination and overwhelm the judgment, exhibit an infinite diversity. The wiscat and test of men are as open to this affliction as the weakest.

Causes. A sedentary life of any kind, especially severe study, protracted to a late hour in the night, and rurely relieved by social intercentree or exercise, a dissolute habit, great excess in eating and drinking, immoderate use of mercury, violant purgatives, the supression of some habitual discharge, (as the obstruction of the meases) or long continued cruption; relaxation or habitity of one or more important organs within the or density of one or continued cruption; relaxation or debility of one or more important organs within the aldone as a frequent cause.

Trectment. The principal objects of treatment are, to remove indigestion, strengthen the body, and enliven the spirits, which may be promoted by exercise, early hours, regular meals, pleasant conversation—the bowdle (if costive) should be carefully regulated by the occasional use of a mild aperiont.
