To error, if serious, and especially if it affect the interests of morality and religion, he claims the right of correction, in the form of reply, or of the suppression of the objectionable matter; and communications for which compensation is expected, must be so prepared as to be fit for the public eye.

In conclusion, we may be allowed to say, that the pecuniary value of each number will depend much on the extent to which the work is patronised. It is not with the desire or expectation of gain that it is affered to the community, but from moral considerations: from a design to know and to promulgate truth. Hence should a large substription list be obtained, a considerable propertion of the profits will be devoted to the enterement and improvement of the work,
