emonies was in the highest degree imposingone side was the bay spread out in a calm beautiful sheet of water, covered with vesof every sort gaily decorated and alive with nan beings; to the North lay the shipping, h its forest of masts and flags of all nations mounted by the ensign of the American Relic, waving in the breeze; on the other side the vast area of the battery, which seemed one dense mass of men, with every post and ry free occupied, whilst far in the distance long line of coach tops and house tops was ered with eager and animated spectators. At the conclusion of the ceromonies in the den, the President, mounted on a very graceand spirited black horse, reviewed the six usand troops gathered on the battery, when y were formed into ranks, and the proc gan slowly to move up Broadway, surrounded all sides by multitudes of both sexes and of ages. The line of march was from Broad-ray up Charthans sircet and the Bowery, trough Broome street into Brondway again from whence it returned to the Park, where the assemblage was dismissed, and the President lest took his leave of the people for the day mid reiterated hurrahs.

Wherever the interminable procession passe it was hailed by the cheers of the throngs colit was named the side walks, by the waving lected upon the side walks, by the waving handkerchiefs of the ladies who crowded the bilconies and windows, and by the shouts and returns and groups who hung upon the very beds continued along the whose course that the rast body advanced. A more animated spectake has not been seen in this city since the landing, in 1824, of Gen. Lafayette. The number of persons gathered together is variously estimated from one hundred thousand to one hun.
