HEALTH OF CHARLESTON. During the week ending on the 29th ult. ere were 19 deaths in Charleston, of which were by the yellow fever.

SICKNESS AT MOBILE.

Up to the 28th ult. the yellow fever continu. with unabated virulence. The number of aths had fallen off, owing to the want of subcts rather than any abatement in the disease, rom the 1st to the 27th inclusive there were 3 deaths. The Rev. W. T. HAMILTON and e Rev. J. HAMILTON were both lying ill.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.

We learn that Mr. THOMAS FORWOOD, of arford county. in this State, was mortally ounded on Thursday morning last, at the redence of Mr. Turner, on Spesutia Island, by ne accidental discharge of a loaded gun in the ands of his friend, a young gentleman of this ity, while preparing for a gunning excursion. le lingered until Saturday morning, when he xpired. No blame is attached to the gentlenan who discharged the piece, other than that f an infringement on the oft repeated caution ot to handle fire arms carelessly on any occa ion. By this regretted act a gentleman much steemed by all who enjoyed his acquaintance as been hurried to his death. When will mea carn wisdom?—Chronicle.

> From the Norfolk Beacon. THE DUEL.

It is with reluctance that we are compelled once more to recur to the reported duel be ween J. Seawell Jones of North Carolina, and Mr. Wilson of New York. The publication of the card of Mr. M'Laughlin, who was believed to be the second of Mr. Jones, in which this paper is alluded to, renders a brief allusion to the subject in some measure necessary. I was on the Friday mentioned in the card Mr. McL. late at night, that Jones called at this office and communicated to the water this article the details of the pretended ducl. We had previously known Jones, and entertained for him all the respect which was general accorded him as a popular champion of North the late Convention of that State, which framed its present Constitution. Under these circum stances his statement was believed. Should i be said that it was singular in a duellist to tell his story to an editor who would publish it to the world and would be a witness against the parties, it must be remembered that the mother and family of Jones resided in Norfolk, and that the affair, according to his statement, must be made public by those who were in quest of his person, with such exaggerations as might give unnecessary pain to his friends. He men tioned that the body of Wilson would be brough down the next day and conveyed by the Baltimore boat to the North. This circumstares might also be supposed to have induced him to disclose the affir to a friendly editor, that public might know the facts and any unnece sary excitement be prevented. We knew that Jones told the affair to his brother, who belies ed it to be true; and, to add a deeper die to hi crime, he told it to his only surviving parentand that parent a mother—who firmly believed and suffered all that such a belief might we inspire, that the blood of a human being slai in opposition to the laws of God and man, rest ed on the head of her first born. We knew that Jones left town that night at 12 o'clock and hastened out of the jurisdiction of

In the mean time, the details of the duel a told by Jones were confirmed in some impo tant particulars. There was firing heard the time stated, the ground was marked off, an there was blood on the field. The handke chief of Jones, covered with blood, was found and seemed to confirm that part of his story which represented the wound of Wilson have been staunched with the handkerchiefs the party. It is true the dead body was no to be found, but as the police were out, it migh have been deemed expedient for very many or gent reasons to conceal it. In this stage of the affair every body believed that a duel ha been fought.

Jones had gone into North Carolina, at some days having clapsed without any notificement to dead body, the public began to be credulous, and letters were addressed to Jone who replied that the body, he understood, h boss secretly busied sees Currituck Court House. In one of his letters he expectuated with a friend who doubted the truth of his late tale, and select him, if he deemed him bad esough so to tamper with the feelings of an aged

We now waited for the correspondence sai to have passed between the parties, which lones promised to forward.

The public opinion after a while seemed to be that the affair was a hoax; and such, indeed, began to be our own belief; but we urged in conversation that it was more reasonable to appose, that a man of any character or stand ing had fought as he said he did, than that. thout any apparent object, he should tell a deliberate falsehood and sacrifice his reputation

The correspondence at last came as stated at the time, enclosed in a letter from a gentleman of high standing, who had known Jones for many years, and who firmly believed in the four weeks after the date of the affair. The hand writing of all the letters was the same, and was unknown to us; but none would ex-pect the original letters from one of the par-ties, and it purported to be a copy only. We acknowledged publicly the receipt of the correspondence, and, still anxious to interpose all fair argument between Jones and the public o- Capt. Bartus Clark, dium which was settling upon his name, we upon his name, we upon his name, we arged whether it was probable that such a friend, a lawyer capable of judging of evidences and intimately acquainted with Jones, and who Mrs. Lucy Dunning. from his elevated station would scorn to be a party to a public falsehood, could be deceived.

This was the state of the affair, and here it rested until the publication of the card of Mr. Miss M. T. Garner, McLaughlin in the Alexandria Gazette of Mon-Capt. Levin Gerden day. That card will speak for itself, and leaves no room for palliation, and the public will a ward that sentence which such conduct de. J. C. A. Hobby, (2) serves. We will only add that we received on B. Houres, the 13th ult. a letter from the gentleman who sent us the correspondence, in which he states that circumstances have recently transpired which induce him to discredit the story, expresses the deepest mortification at the sacrifice of the character of a gentleman whom he once esteemed, but affords no clue to the mo-tives of the chief actor. It is possible that Jones may have acted during a fit of temporary derangement, but nothing at the time or since, in his manner, indicated such a state of

The Blood has hitherto been considered by Empiricks and others, as the great regulator of the human system, and such is the devotchness of the adherents to that erroneous doctrine, that they content themselves with the simple possecsion of this fallacious opinion, without enquiring into the primary sources from whence Life, Health, and vigour emansate, and, vice werse, pain, sickness, disease and death. Not so with Dr. Huxr, whose extensive research and practical experience so eminently qualify him for the profession of the health been one of the most useful members. He contends—and a moment's reflection will convince any reasoning mind of the correctness of h's views—that the stomach, liver, and the associated organs are the primary and great regulators of health, and that the blood in very many instances is dependent on these organs, and that unless modicine reaches THE POOT OF THE DISEASE, the superficial modgre, exually preceptibel, serve but as foils to cover the ravages of deep-rooted ma'adies. Under these convictions, at the expense of close application, the doctor has discovered a medicine whose searching powers are irresistible, and in prescribing, it is with a knowledge of its being a radical cure in the various
