DIRECTIONS.

When children begin to be in pain with their tooth sheeting in their gams, put a little of the Syrup in a stangon, and with the finger let the child's gams be rabbed for two or three minutes, three times a day. It must not be put to the breast immediately for the milk would take the syrup off too soon. When the teeth are just coming through their gams, mothers should immediately apply the syrup; it will prevent the children having a force, and undergoing that painful operation of incing the gams, which always makes the next tooth much harder to come thro and sometimes causes death. THE BARON FON HUTCHELER HERB PILLS.

These Fills are composed of Herts, which exert a specific action hoos too heart, give an impulse or strength to the arterial system; the blood is quickened and equalized in its circultifies through all the vessels, whether of the skim, the parts situated internally, or the axiremities; and as all the secretions of the body are drawn from the blood; there is a consequent in crosse of every secretion; and a quickened action of the absorbent and arkalent, or discharging vessels. Any morbid action which may have taken place is correct, and obstructions are removed, the blood is purified, and the body resumes a beathiful state.

Those Fills, after much anxious toil and research, having been brought by the Proprieter to the present state of perfocation, supersede the nas of the innumerable other medicines; and are so well adapted to the frame, that the use of thom, by maintaining the body in the due performance of its functions, and greenering the vital stream in a pure and healthy state, caused it to last many years longer than it otherwise would, and the mind to become so composed and tranquil, that old age where it arrives, well appear a blessing, and set (as too many who have neglected their constitutions, or bad them injured by medicines administered by ignorance) a searce of misery and abborreace

They are so compounded, that by strengthening and oqualizing the action of the heart, liver, and other viscoura, they are obtained the passage of the bowels, so that by the brisk or slight evacuations, which may be regulated by the done of the Perp I Pills, always remembering that while the evacuations from the bowels are kept up, the accret ons from all the other vessels of the body will also be going on in the same proportion, by which means the blood invariably become: partified.

MISCELLANEOUS. Translated for the New York Mirror.

THE BRIDE OF THE SUN. Some three years ago, there lived at Montmartre, in the private establisment of the kind and indefatigable Doctor Blanche, a woman whose insanity was singular and affecting. She whose insanty was singular and anceting, one was young, her features were pleasing, and her smile still more so; the only mental disorder she had was the belief that she was betrothed to the sun—he had promised her marriage she thought, on a bright autumn morning, and her lover had covered his radiant visage with clouds to avoid dazzling the eyes of his mictress. Since had left her spouse's burning kiss imprinted on her hand, and she new lived for him alone. The sun was her joy, and her pride, and her glory; poor efenture! she rose at the very instant when her best-beloved cast his first rays across the sky, and hailed him with her looks, as the birds do with their songs, the stream with its mur-mur, the flowers with their perfume. The finer the day, the clearer the sky, the more radiant the whole face of nature, the happier was the poor wretch! Was it not her godlike husband that distributed light, and warmth, and comfort around him? Was he not the monarch of the world, and was he not her?! So the Tatabad world, and was he not her's? So she watched every change of place or appearance which her divinity presented; sh lose the feeblest of his rays, and the higher he rose in the heaven the more ardent was her postical enthusiasm. She could hardly be persuad. ed to take her meals, so full of passion was she; and to make her eat, it was necessary to tell her that it was her divine spouse who had gilded these fruit, ripened this grain and these grapes—so that she had a right to sit down at the table he had himself prepared for her. As night drew near, and the sun was on the point of sinking into the waters of the Scine, his tender spouse became as uneasy as any poor fisher-man's wife, whose husband has been absent a couple of months, when she hears the sea roar "What will become of my husband?" she used to say-"If he only escapes accidents while he is on his journey!" Gradually day would give place to night; then she would clasp her hands, rest. Singular and happy madness! sweet delosion! to feel that one's soul belongs to the sun in heaven- to have no other desire than for an unsullied sky-to fear nothing but the clouds that es obscure the face of the great luminary—to be happy whenever all nature is happy! Such was the life of this poor lunatic for ten years. She had her troubles, too, as much as though she had retained her reason; for as soon as winter approached, and she saw the face of Beptember 26.

and cry-"Wait for me-wait! and hurry to her spouse grow pale, like that of a man most tally wounded-a ben the saw his glory hid ich behind thick clouds, like a man whose resewn is blackened by eney, she became the most me-lancholy of momen. How long and sad were the short days of minter! The more exalted her heldegroom was, the more did she suffer at seeing him debased, obscured, enclaimed, and helplom. But she is soon to be happy again; yet a little while, and the sun pierces through the thick masses of rapour that conceal his the thick masses of vapour that conceal his brightness and re-appears in all his grandeur new glary. Bo, when this poor lunatid found her apouse, at the return of spring, the same as he had been in the foregoing season, and saw the leaves of every tree and bush breaking their prisons to welcome him, joy returned to her spirit—she put on her gayest drasses, and sung her most cheerful hymn: "Rejoice, all yo in heaven and on earth' reloice," we stars of the heaven and on earth; rejoice, ye stars of the firmment; rejoice, ye waves of the stream!

—ye angels who are above our heads, and ye men who trend the earth beneath your feet, rejoicel for my spense, the sun, was sick, and has come back in health; he was lost, and now is ten years, in spite of all efforts of science. The bride of the s.n died some three years ago, and her death was as touching as her life. It was noon of a lovely day; the sun was bright, yet mild, and showered down its purest rays on all mild, and showered down its purest rays on all creation. His bride, seated on the turf under an aged fruit-tree, watched the movements of her august spouse in the sky. Her heart had never been more filled with love, her glances had sever been more tender, her dream had never approached nearer to a reality. They understood each other so well—the sun and she!

—he moved so slowly through the sky, doubtless to have the more time to look upon her as she knelt before him. But, oh heavens! all at once the fountain of light and heat stops, and grows dark; all at once it disappears—not as formerly, sinking gradually into the river, after having shaken brilliant gold-dust from his garments; but pauses abruptly, hides his visage, and screamed, my hunband is with a rival—he is false to me! he has left me during the day, and will not return again at night!"-and the poor creature, who lived only to gaze on him by day, to wait for him at night, to greet him in the morning, to sing his praise in spring, to admire him in summer, and weep for him in winter the poor creature, seeing him disappear so suddenly, without knowing whither he went, or when he would return, died during the eclipse died of jealousy, love and despair.

Why is a homely girl like a Black smith's apron! Because she keeps off the Sparks.

PEVER AND AGUE PILLS.

These pills, so admirably adapted to afford uniform relief in the different medifications of these distressing maladies, are particularly recemmended to public notice. On the accession of the cold stage, when the face and limbs of the sufferer become pale, and the sensation of cold and languer is felt perveding the whole system—their administration is accompanied with astonishing success—they soon lessen the subsequent distressing shivering and violent shaking, and by continuing in their use, (as directed) will ultimately cure the most obstinate ague. These pills are of signal utility in those distressing cases, where there is a sullewness of complexion, pain in the region of the liver, tension and distress in the epigratic region, with other symptoms indicating the existence of morbid action, or chronic disease of the stomach, liver, bowels, mecantery or spleen, which consequences so generally supervene from protracted intermittents. They nermanently a vercome those diseases—at the same time give tone to the stomach, cleanse and strengthen the bowds and impart health, vigour and energy to the system.

Many persons emigrate to the rich and fertile soil or tise West, in the hope of attaining a future competen cy, but alast ere leng that hope becomes blasted, when they appear with impaired and enfelobled constitutions, resulting from attacks of that direful terror of the West, Fever and Ague. If such persons had reacted to the use of the above pills, the sunken pallid countenance would have been restored to its florid hue, the vital energy re-established, and the whole system purified and invigorated. They are now regarded as an in-the use of the above pills, the sunken pallid countenance would have been restored to its florid hue, the vital energy re-established, and the whole system purified and invigorated. They are now regarded as an inestimable public blessing, and misspen-able to the health, comfort, and even the local presperity of the inhabitants of many portions of our western country. In all cases of Bilious and Nervous Fever, Hypochoadriscism, Low Spirits, Palpitations of the Heart, Nervous Irritability, Nervous Weakness, Flnor Albus, Seminal Weakness, Indigestion, Loss of Appetits, Pains in the Side, Limbs, Head, Stomach or Back, will invariably be removed by the use of the Pills.

On first feeling the prenomitory symptoms secur, it is advisable at once to clear theroughly the stomach and lowels. In no way can this be better and less inconveniently effected, than by taking a few deces of the value and well-authenticated virtues of which medicine have been, and still are, too apparent to call for further comment. They tend to promote a healthy servicing with benefit the Invigorating and Strengtoning Pills.

Directions are as follows:—Take four or more of the Edic and reader the system vapable of receiving with benefit the Invigorating and Strengtoning Pills on the first accession of Fever, and continue the same number every other night, till with the additional use of the Invigorating Pills, a permanent cure is obtained.

Take three of the Invigorating Fills, a permanent care is obtained.

Take three of the Invigorating Fills in the morning, three at noon, and three in the vening, on the days when the attacks do not occur.

The attacks usually occur every other day.
