EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Workplace fraud is the intentional misclassification of employees as independent contractors or through “off-the-books” labor. Employers often engage in workplace fraud in an attempt to circumvent the payment of overtime wages, employment taxes, and workers’ compensation coverage that employers are legally obligated to provide to their employees. It is estimated that between 10-30% of employers misclassify their workers.

Workplace fraud has real, negative consequences for workers, law-abiding businesses and taxpayers. Misclassified workers have no recourse if they are not paid their wages, forced to work excessive hours or in dangerous conditions, discriminated against, or are hurt on the job. Responsible businesses are forced to compete in the marketplace against employers that have lowered their payroll expenses and increased their profits through workplace fraud. These responsible employers also pay higher unemployment insurance taxes and workers’ compensation premiums on behalf of those that do not. Finally, workplace fraud costs the taxpayers millions of dollars in tax revenues that could be used for the benefit of the state. A recent study estimated that Maryland loses approximately $20 million to the Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund alone due to misclassification.

Maryland has recently joined a growing state and federal movement to combat workplace fraud or employee misclassification. The General Assembly passed the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009, which took effect on October 1, 2009. The Workplace Fraud Act strengthened the State’s existing enforcement powers and created a new misclassification violation in the construction and landscaping industries. Governor Martin O’Malley also established a Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud to coordinate enforcement efforts with the appropriate state agencies, facilitate data and information sharing, and increase awareness about workplace fraud.

Although the Task Force has only existed for five (5) months at the time of this report, and the Workplace Fraud Act has only been effective for two (2) months, the Task Force is making progress and has already begun to make our different state agencies and divisions work more collaboratively and effectively.

Among other things, the Task Force has:

- Established three workgroups to focus on enforcement, data sharing, and education and outreach.
- Initiated 16 Task Force-coordinated unemployment insurance tax investigations. While some of these audits are ongoing, to date they have identified 1,456 misclassified workers and approximately $3.5 million in unreported wages paid to employees.
- Coordinated information sharing procedures and the signing of necessary memoranda of understanding to make this inter-agency information sharing possible.
- Reached data sharing agreements with the IRS aimed at uncovering employment tax fraud.
- Established a website and phone number for complaints.
- Conducted extensive outreach to professionals and employers impacted by the Workplace Fraud Act.
- Studied best practices employed by task forces working on these issues in other states.
- Assisted New York State with a multi-state workplace fraud prosecution.

I. BACKGROUND ON WORKPLACE FRAUD

A. WHAT IS EMPLOYEE MISCLASSIFICATION AND WORKPLACE FRAUD?

Many of our state and federal employment and anti-discrimination laws are based on the employer-employee relationship. Workers who are classified as “employees” receive a range of legal protections, including the right to minimum wage and overtime, the availability of anti-discrimination laws, and eligibility for unemployment insurance if they are laid off and workers’ compensation if they are injured. Businesses with employees are subject to wage and hour laws; required to pay unemployment insurance taxes, social security taxes, and workers’ compensation premiums for their employees; and withhold federal and state income taxes.¹

Recent Maryland and federal studies estimate that approximately 20% of employers misclassify their workers.² Some of these employers may be confused about the definition of an “employee” or may believe that their employees are true independent contractors. Other employers deliberately misclassify their employees as “independent contractors” or pay them “off-the-books” in an effort to avoid the costs and obligations associated with employees. When employers intentionally misclassify their employees in this way, they engage in workplace fraud.

Workplace Fraud negatively impacts workers, law-abiding employers, and taxpayers:

(1) Workplace fraud harms workers who lose out on workplace protections.

Misclassified employees have no recourse if they are hurt or killed on the job, laid off, discriminated against or harassed. They are also more likely to be paid sub-minimum wages or to work in dangerous conditions.

(2) Workplace fraud unfairly disadvantages employers who play by the rules.

Responsible employers lose a competitive edge because their payroll costs are higher than employers who manipulate the system. Responsible employers also pay higher Workers’ Compensation premiums and Unemployment Insurance tax on behalf of those who fail to pay.

² David W. Stevens, An Estimate of Maryland’s Annual Net Unemployment Compensation Tax Loss from Misclassification of Covered Employees, Baltimore, Md, February 1, 2009 (estimating that approximately 20% of Maryland employers misclassify their employees); Planmatics, Inc. Independent Contractors: Prevalence and Implications for Unemployment Insurance Program, Rockville, Md, February 2000 (finding that between 10-30% of employers in nine (9) states misclassify their employees.)

(3) Workplace fraud deprives our communities of much-needed revenue.

It is estimated that the state loses as much as $20 million a year to the Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund due to misclassification.³ Millions of dollars in tax revenues are also lost to the general fund.

In recent years, there have been increasing efforts to combat workplace fraud on the state and federal levels. Some states including New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, and Maine have established task forces to examine workplace fraud and coordinate enforcement efforts. Other states have introduced new legislation to specifically prohibit the purposeful misclassification of an employee as an independent contractor, and/or establish a presumption of an employment relationship.⁴ Various bills have been introduced on the federal level that would strengthen existing law through amendment of the tax code, the Fair Labor Standards Act, or ERISA.⁵ The Government Accountability Office also recently issued a report to Congress concluding that different federal agencies could and should be doing more to coordinate enforcement efforts utilizing existing federal laws, and exploring possible legislative changes to strengthen these laws.⁶

B. ADDRESSING THE WORKPLACE FRAUD PROBLEM IN MARYLAND

In 2009 Maryland joined approximately 32 other states that have taken measures to address the misclassification problem by passing the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 and creating the Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud.

THE WORKPLACE FRAUD ACT

The Workplace Fraud Act (2009, Ch. 188) (the Act) requires the different state agencies and divisions that are impacted by workplace fraud to share information when they find or suspect that misclassification has occurred.⁷ The Act, which took effect on October 1, 2009, creates violations of state law for misclassification and provides for penalties to strengthen enforcement in three areas of state law:

IMPACT ON EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS LAW⁸

- The WFA creates a separate violation for misclassification in the landscaping and construction industries;
- Adopts the “ABC Test” to identify legitimate independent contractors;⁹
- Requires that employers maintain records and documentation on the independent contractors with whom they do business, and that they provide these independent contractors with a notice explaining their classification;
- Employers who “improperly misclassify” workers have 45 days to pay restitution and come into compliance with all applicable laws;
- Employers who “knowingly” misclassify their workers are subject to a civil penalty of up to $5,000 per employee;
- Creates a private right of action for workers who believe they were misclassified;
- Contains anti-retaliation provisions for workers who complain of misclassification.

IMPACT ON UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW¹⁰

- Keeps the existing presumption that a worker is a covered employee;
- Keeps the 50 year-old “ABC Test” to identify legitimate independent contractors;¹¹
- Employers who “knowingly” misclassify their workers are subject to a civil penalty of up to $5,000 per employee;
- Civil penalties of up to $20,000 are also available for “knowingly” advising an employer to violate the Act.

IMPACT ON WORKERS’ COMPENSATION LAW¹²

- Establishes a misclassification violation and a presumption that a worker is a covered employee unless the employer proves otherwise;
- Determination of independent contractor status remains based on the common law;¹³

⁸ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 3-901, et. seq.

⁹ The three prongs of the so-called “ABC test” are: (a) the individual is free from control and direction; (b) the individual is customarily engaged in an independent business of the same nature; and (c) the work is outside the usual course of business of the employer or performed outside of any place of business of the employer.

¹⁰ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 8-201, § 8-201.1.

¹¹ See footnote 9 for a brief description of the ABC test.

¹² See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 9-202, § 9-402.1.

¹³ Among factors traditionally considered by the Maryland Court of Appeals are: whether the employer has the power to hire or terminate the individual; whether the employer controls or directs the work; whether the work is part of the employer’s regular business; and the payment of wages.

- Adds a civil penalty not to exceed $5,000 if the Workers' Compensation Commission finds that an employer has "knowingly" violated the Act;
- Adds a civil penalty not to exceed $20,000 if the Workers' Compensation Commission finds a person has "knowingly" advised an employer on how to violate the Act.

THE EXECUTIVE ORDER

On July 14, 2009, Governor O'Malley signed Executive Order No. 01.01.2009.09, creating a Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud.¹⁴ The Executive Order, which is modeled after those used in other states, finds that "law enforcement and regulatory efforts to combat and prevent workplace fraud have been divided historically among various agencies, reducing their efficiency and effectiveness." The Executive Order further finds that the implementation and enforcement of the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 "can be enhanced further and made more efficient through interagency cooperation, information sharing, and joint prosecution of serious violators." As such, the Executive Order charges the Task Force with, among other things: facilitating referrals and information sharing related to suspected workplace fraud; engaging in collaborative enforcement; and raising awareness about the problem of workplace fraud through education and outreach.

The Task Force consists of:

- (1) The Secretary of Labor, Licensing and Regulation, or designee;
- (2) The Attorney General or designee;
- (3) The Comptroller or the Comptroller's designee;
- (4) The Chair of the Workers' Compensation Commission or the Chair's designee;
- (5) The Insurance Commissioner or the Commissioner's designee;
- (6) The Commissioner of Labor and Industry or the Commissioner's designee;
- (7) The Assistant Secretary for Unemployment Insurance or the Assistant Secretary's designee.

The Secretary of Labor, Licensing and Regulation serves as the Task Force chair, convening the meetings and coordinating Task Force efforts.

¹⁴ See Appendix A.

This report documents the progress and initial steps the Task Force has taken since its creation and its goals for the coming year.

II. TASK FORCE ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The principal charge of the Joint Enforcement Task Force (the Task Force) is coordination and collaboration in addressing the problem of workplace fraud. Before the creation of the Task Force, agencies or divisions that discovered or suspected misclassification did not share this information with other agencies or divisions. Although various state agencies and divisions had data relevant to employee misclassification and fraud investigations, they did not share it with each other. The primary focus of the Task Force in its first few months of existence has been to break down these traditional barriers, pool our information and resources, and create new collaborative approach workplace fraud enforcement.

At its first meeting the Task Force agreed to create three workgroups made up of on-the-ground staff in the various divisions and agencies to meet and work together on issues of concern for the Task Force. These workgroups are: the enforcement workgroup, the data sharing workgroup, and the education and outreach workgroup.

COLLABORATIVE ENFORCEMENT. Enforcement workgroup members are meeting approximately every two weeks to review complaints of workplace fraud, make referrals, talk through investigations, and identify cases appropriate for joint enforcement. Although these enforcement efforts are still in their infancy, the results of information sharing and collaborative enforcement are already producing worthwhile results:

- After an investigation into a Maryland security company by the Living Wage Unit of the Division of Labor and Industry uncovered a large volume of “off the books” work, the Division of Unemployment Insurance got involved in the investigation. Its audit revealed approximately 50 misclassified employees and $181,000 in taxable wages for 2008. In the year 2009, the company had declared no employees, but an audit revealed 25 misclassified employees and $183,000 in taxable wages. Unpaid wages owed these employees are still being calculated.
- After seeing a notice about Workplace Fraud on the Governor’s website, the State Highways Administration referred a case of suspected misclassification on a state contract to the Task Force. The investigation is ongoing, but an Unemployment Insurance Audit found 58 misclassified employees for the audit year 2008, resulting in an increase of nearly $334,000 in the taxable wages reported. The Comptroller and the Workers’ Compensation Commission have yet to determine the amount in back taxes and premiums that may be owed.

DATA SHARING. Agencies and divisions have created plans to share data and information in ways that will help them identify significant cases of workplace fraud and strengthen their enforcement efforts.

- The Workers' Compensation Commission and the Division of Unemployment Insurance executed a Memorandum of Understanding and are engaged in ongoing data exchange regarding open and closed employer accounts. The Task Force anticipates that the Comptroller will begin participating in this data exchange shortly, to the degree permitted by law.
- The Division of Labor & Industry, the Division of Unemployment Insurance and the Comptroller have begun exchanging information regarding suspected misclassification on state contracts. They hope to further refine this information exchange and create a system by which data can be sorted and transferred through a secure electronic location.
- The Division of Unemployment Insurance has executed a Memorandum of Understanding with IRS to exchange tips and referrals regarding suspected misclassification. They anticipate that this information exchange should be up and running within the next few months.

EDUCATION AND OUTREACH. In an effort to educate the public about workplace fraud, the recent changes in Maryland law, and the work of the Task Force, Task Force members have participated in numerous outreach events, including the:

- AFL-CIO Biennial Convention;
- Carroll County Business Luncheon;
- Commissioner of Labor & Industry's monthly construction roundtable discussions;
- Fed/State Tax Institute Seminars (in Greenbelt, Baltimore, Easton, and Frederick);
- Harford County Chamber of Commerce, Legislative Committee;
- Howard County Business event on Workplace Fraud, sponsored by Delegates Bates and Miller and Senator Kittleman;
- Maryland Association of CPAs - State Taxation Committee;
- Maryland Chamber of Commerce;
- Maryland National Capital Home Care Conference;
- Maryland State Bar Association, Labor and Employment Section Annual Dinner.

PARTNERING WITH OTHER STATES. Task Force members recognize that workplace fraud is a national problem that does not stop at the state line. Applying the same principles that guide the Task Force’s collaboration among different state agencies and stakeholders, the Task Force has been building partnerships with other states as a way to learn best practices, pool resources, and enhance enforcement efforts.

Task Force members took a “field trip” to New York to visit the New York Joint Enforcement Task Force on Employee Misclassification, which has existed since September 2007, and learn about its best practices and enforcement efforts. The Executive Director of the New York Enforcement Task Force then came to Maryland to address the first meeting of the Task Force.

In October 2009, Task Force representatives attended the Northeastern Regional States Summit on Employee Misclassification and the Underground Economy, which was hosted by the Massachusetts Joint Task Force on the Underground Economy and Employee Misclassification. Other attendees included representatives from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. One of the topics for discussion was engaging in interstate enforcement actions.

Just a few weeks ago, the Task Force assisted the New York Task Force with criminal prosecution involving workers who live in Maryland and were recruited in Maryland, but were then brought to upstate New York to perform construction work. These workers alleged that their employer had misclassified them, denied them the wages and overtime benefits they were due, and laundered money by having wages for other employees flow through their paychecks. Working with the New York Department of Labor, the Task Force arranged for the workers to come and be interviewed for the case by video conference between New York and Maryland. These video conferences will form the backbone of the case, which would not have gone forward had the low-wage workers been required to travel back to New York to be interviewed.

III. TASK FORCE MEMBER REPORTS

The different state agencies and divisions that make up the Task Force are impacted differently by workplace fraud. The following summary provides an overview of Task Force member agencies' and divisions' respective efforts to combat workplace fraud and how these efforts complement the work of the Task Force.

A. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, LICENSING AND REGULATION

1. DIVISION OF LABOR AND INDUSTRY

The Division of Labor and Industry (DLI) of the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation enforces Maryland's workplace protection laws, including the Wage Payment and Collection law, Living Wage law, Child Labor law, Prevailing Wage law, and Occupational Safety and Health laws.

The Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 created a new violation of the Employment Standards subtitle for misclassification of an employee in the landscaping and construction industries.¹⁵ The Division of Labor and Industry's Employment Standards Service (ESS) is in the process of building a unit that will investigate complaints of workplace fraud within the landscaping and construction industries and ensure compliance with the Act. The required appropriation approval for this unit is in the final stages of the budgetary process and DLI plans to begin hiring within the next few months. In the meantime, DLI is developing training and outreach materials, procedures, questionnaires and a database so that the new unit will be ready to begin work as soon as possible.

DLI has also conducted outreach within the subject industries to make them aware of the changes in the law. With the assistance of the Attorney General, DLI has issued regulations explaining some of the provisions of the Workplace Fraud Act, including the notice and recordkeeping provisions. DLI has also issued proposed regulations containing illustrative factual examples intended to provide guidance to employers within the landscaping and construction industries.

Finally, investigators from DLI's Living Wage and Prevailing Wage units are engaged in ongoing information sharing with other Task Force members regarding suspected misclassification of workers on government contracts.

2. DIVISION OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

The Division of Unemployment Insurance (DUI) within the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation administers the collection of unemployment insurance contributions from employers and the payment of unemployment insurance benefits to eligible employees who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own. DUI routinely performs employer audits to ensure that Maryland employers are reporting all of their employees and making proper contributions. Some such audits begin when a worker files a claim for benefits but the employer has never reported their income or made unemployment insurance contributions for this income. DUI will conduct an audit to determine if the worker was actually an employee for whom the employer should have been making unemployment insurance contributions. Traditionally a large percentage of DUI audits were also generated randomly.

In 2009 DUI began to shift from random audits to more statistically-driven auditing. Based on the data that DUI collects from claimants, it began focusing more of its efforts in industries where misclassification is most prevalent. The results are stark. As the chart below shows, by focusing on the industries with a proven incidence of misclassification, DUI more than doubled the number of misclassified employees it found:

Quarter	Total Audits	Non-random Audits	Misclassified Workers Found	Taxable Wages Uncovered
2008-1	650	0	1,339	$5,809,358
2008-2	720	0	1,055	$4,708,354
2008-3	947	107	1,618	$7,134,811
TOTAL	2,317	107	4,012	$17,652,523
2009-1	863	306	3,914	$33,050,770
2009-2	697	392	3,348	$12,959,601
2009-3	513	434	1,212	$4,976,734
TOTAL	2,073	1,132	8,474	$50,987,105

To date, DUI has initiated sixteen (16) audits that were generated by referrals from the Task Force or Task Force partner agencies. Many of these audits are ongoing. However, the audits that have been completed have identified 1,456 misclassified workers and approximately $3.5 million in previously unreported taxable wages paid to these employees.¹⁶ While this data is very preliminary, it does suggest that Task Force generated referrals and complaints will further help the DUI focus its audit resources on employers who are engaging in misclassification.

B. ATTORNEY GENERAL

As Maryland's chief legal officer, the Attorney General has general charge, direction and supervision of the legal business of the state, focusing primarily on the representation of state agencies. As such, the Office of the Attorney General has provided legal guidance on all aspects of Maryland's efforts to combat workplace fraud, including: assisting with the drafting of the statute itself, including appropriate amendments; drafting regulations to implement the Workplace Fraud Act; and providing guidance as to the legality of inter-agency data and information sharing. Assistant Attorneys General who represent DLLR also attend various meetings and provide advice to the Division of Unemployment Insurance and the Division of Labor and Industry regarding implementation of the Workplace Fraud Act. The Attorney General's designee attends all Task Force workgroup meetings to provide guidance on any and all new questions that may arise regarding joint enforcement and information sharing. The Office of the Attorney General also represents the state in all litigation related to the enforcement of the Act.

C. COMPTROLLER

One of the Comptroller's primary duties is to administer the collection of the individual and employer taxes that make up an essential part of the State revenue needed to provide services to its citizens. The Comptroller's ability to collect these taxes is greatly impaired when employers fail to report all of their employees or properly withhold income and employment taxes on their behalves. Although the Comptroller is bound by certain confidentiality provisions, the Comptroller's Office is permitted to receive and act upon information from other departments and use that information to conduct its own investigation of withholding and income tax fraud or failure to file. The Comptroller will receive referrals from other Task Force member agencies when an investigation or audit has revealed workplace fraud. The Comptroller is also working with the Division of Unemployment Insurance and the Workers' Compensation Commission to gain access to their ongoing data exchanges.

¹⁶ These numbers represent employees and taxable wages found for tax years 2007, 2008, and 2009.

D. INSURANCE ADMINISTRATION

The Maryland Insurance Administration (MIA) regulates licensed insurance carriers in Maryland, including workers compensation carriers. Under the Insurance Article, the MIA may investigate and prosecute fraudulent insurance acts, which include the making of false or fraudulent statements or representations in or with reference to an application for insurance, including misclassification of employees or under-reporting of payroll.¹⁷ The Insurance Article further requires that every regulated insurer file an insurance antifraud plan with the Insurance Commissioner.¹⁸

As part of its statutory duty to review antifraud plans, the MIA conducted a survey of the eight largest licensed workers' compensation carriers in Maryland to determine if, inter alia, the Plans on file detailed specific procedures for detecting and preventing premium avoidance fraud. Pursuant to the results of this survey, the MIA issued a bulletin recommending as a 'best practice' that workers' compensation carriers require any applicant who claims to use independent contractors to produce a certificate of insurance for general liability coverage, a copy of the independent contractor's business license, a written subcontract for each job conducted by the sub-contracted laborer, and a signed copy of the Workers' Compensation Commission's Sole Proprietor's Status as a Covered Employee form. The MIA is considering adopting regulations that would require carriers to comply with these 'best practices' and will be considering carrier feedback on this issue.

The MIA is also collaborating with the Attorney General's office and local State's Attorneys Offices in prosecuting insurance fraud cases. In one recent case, the owner of an elevator repair business in Woodlawn pled guilty to felony theft for underreporting his company's payroll to his worker's compensation insurer. It is estimated that the man under-paid $58,318.09 in premiums.

E. WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

¹⁷ See Md. Code Ann., Insurance, § 27-406.

¹⁸ See Md. Code Ann., Insurance, § 27-803.

The Maryland Workers' Compensation Commission (WCC) adjudicates and resolves issues regarding entitlement to benefits to workers who have become injured as a result of disease or injury connected to their employment. The passage of the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 created a separate violation for misclassification in the Workers' Compensation law. In order to make employers aware of the new law and bring them into compliance, the WCC began an Employer Compliance Program. The program focuses on education and outreach to employers. Through the ongoing information sharing with the Division of Unemployment Insurance, the WCC is also advising all new employers in Maryland who open an unemployment insurance account of their responsibility to also obtain workers' compensation coverage.

IV. ADMINISTRATIVE AND LEGAL BARRIERS

The Task Force is not in a position to formally recommend any administrative, legislative, or regulatory changes at this time, having only been in operation for a few months. However, in implementing the Executive Order and the Workplace Fraud Act, the Task Force has identified some potential barriers to enforcement that will require further exploration and bear mentioning here.

LIMITATIONS ON ABILITY TO PROSECUTE FRAUD. The Maryland Workers' Compensation Commission is required to share information regarding suspected insurance fraud with the Insurance Fraud Division of the Maryland Insurance Administration.¹⁹ However, the Insurance Fraud Division's ability to prosecute such fraud is hampered by another provision of the Workers' Compensation law which grants persons immunity from prosecution for "any act, transaction, matter, or thing about which the person testifies under oath or produces a document, on order of the Commission or an examiner or inspector of the Commission."²⁰ There is no case law clarifying whether this immunity extends to persons who voluntarily testify or produce documents to the Commission, or is limited to those persons who are subpoenaed by the Commission. However, this provision does represent a potential barrier to effective enforcement and the Task Force is exploring how to best address it.

¹⁹ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 9-310.2.

²⁰ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 9-716.

DIFFERING FORMS, PROCEDURES, AND DATA COLLECTION TOOLS. Task Force member agencies and divisions have different intake procedures, protocols, and referral forms. Similarly, Task Force members collect and keep their data in different forms, using different systems. A major challenge for the Task Force is to minimize these differences and help develop more standardized forms, procedures, and modes of data collection to ensure that (1) all referrals from a Task Force members contain the basic information of interest to all other member agencies and divisions; and (2) the data shared among Task Force members can be effectively analyzed by other member agencies and divisions.

DATA SHARING RESTRICTIONS. Although Task Force member agencies are required to share data among themselves and with other law enforcement authorities, the degree to which they can share this data is restricted by state and federal confidentiality requirements. For example, although the Division of Unemployment Insurance will soon begin receiving information on misclassification from the Internal Revenue Service, this information cannot be further shared among the partner agencies. Balancing confidentiality concerns with the need to maximize data sharing potential will be an ongoing challenge for the Task Force.

POTENTIALLY INCONSISTENT DETERMINATIONS. The Workplace Fraud Act helped standardize the different legal tests that Task Force member agencies and divisions use in determining if a worker is an employee or an independent contractor. However, the possibility for inconsistency in these tests remains. For example, the Workers' Compensation Commission uses common law to determine if a worker is an employee, while the DLLR Division of Unemployment Insurance and DLLR Division of Labor and Industry use the three-part "ABC test." Thus, while it is likely that in most instances a determination as to a worker's status will be the same under either legal standard,²¹ the Task Force must remain aware of the possibility of inconsistent determinations.

V. NEXT STEPS AND GOALS FOR 2010

- IMPROVED TASK FORCE WEBSITE. The Task Force is in the process of building a webpage that will be accessible through the webpages of the member agencies and divisions. The webpage will have an online complaint form to allow members of the public to lodge

²¹ The outcome is likely to be the same because both tests focus on similar factors such as who directs and controls the work, and whether the individual has an independent business separate from the employers' usual business.

complaints more easily. The webpage will also include educational content for workers, employers and the general public.

- HIGH-IMPACT ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS. In the coming year the Task Force hopes to take its enforcement efforts a step further by participating in joint enforcement actions in which representatives from Task Force member agencies and divisions visit work sites together to conduct field investigations and interview workers.
- INCREASED OUTREACH TO WORKERS. In its first few months of operation, the Task Force focused on educating industry groups and professionals, including employment lawyers and accountants, about misclassification and the Workplace Fraud Act. In 2010, the Task Force hopes to expand its outreach to affected workers so that they are more aware of their rights and the remedies available to them.
- TOWN HALL MEETINGS. In an effort to increase public awareness about workplace fraud, the Task Force is considering holding a series of Town Hall meetings throughout the state. Similar task forces in other states have found Town Hall meetings effective and recommended such meetings as a way of reaching workers and employers who are farther from the urban centers.
- IMPROVED DATA SHARING. Task Force members hope to develop a more complex database through which all task force members can access, search and download data. This would facilitate ongoing data sharing by providing a single secure place for data and would streamline the investigative process.

EXECUTIVE ORDER
01.01.2009.09

The Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud

- WHEREAS, Workplace fraud, a business practice where employers fail to properly classify individuals as employees, is an ongoing problem;
- WHEREAS, Employers engaging in workplace fraud avoid their obligations under federal and state labor, employment, and tax laws, including laws governing minimum wage, overtime, prevailing wage, living wage, unemployment insurance, workers' compensation insurance, temporary disability insurance, wage payment, and income taxes;
- WHEREAS, Workplace fraud adversely impacts individuals, businesses, and Maryland's economy in significant ways, including: depriving workers of critical protections and benefits to which they are legally entitled; reducing compliance with employment and occupational safety standards; giving employers who fail to properly classify their employees an unfair competitive advantage over law-abiding employers; denying the State millions of dollars in tax revenues, unemployment insurance contributions, and workers' compensation premiums; and increasing the demand for social services;
- WHEREAS, Recent audits show that approximately 20% of Maryland employers misclassify employees as independent contractors;
- WHEREAS, Law enforcement and regulatory efforts to combat and prevent workplace fraud have been divided historically among various agencies, reducing their efficiency and effectiveness;
- WHEREAS, The Workplace Fraud Act of 2009, Chapter 188 of the 2009 Laws of Maryland, enhanced the ability of the State to take enforcement actions against workplace fraud violations;

WHEREAS, These enforcement efforts can be enhanced further and made more efficient through interagency cooperation, information sharing, and joint prosecution of serious violators; and

WHEREAS, The creation of joint task forces in other states has proven an effective mechanism for coordinating and enhancing law enforcement to address the problem of workplace fraud.

NOW THEREFORE, I, MARTIN O'MALLEY, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MARYLAND, BY VIRTUE OF THE AUTHORITY VESTED IN ME BY THE CONSTITUTION AND THE LAWS OF MARYLAND, HEREBY PROCLAIM THE FOLLOWING EXECUTIVE ORDER, EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY:

- A. There is a Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud (Task Force).
- B. For purposes of this Executive Order, "workplace fraud" means an employer's failure to properly classify an individual as an employee in violation of applicable law.
- C. The Task Force shall consist of:
 - (1) The Secretary of Labor, Licensing and Regulation or the Secretary's designee;
 - (2) The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee;
 - (3) The Comptroller or the Comptroller's designee;
