Jewish Holiday ‘Purim’

PURIM READING

Drafted by Ira Dounn. Shared by Sen. Cheryl C. Kagan

Thursday, March 5, 2015 MD State Senate

Many of you know that the custom on the Jewish holiday of Purim is to dress up in costumes. On this Purim, which began yesterday at sundown and continues today until sundown, not many of us know why. Here are a couple of answers that might have personal relevance to us and our work to improve the lives of the residents of the State of Maryland:

• The name “Esther” – the hero of the Purim story – actually means “hidden.” Esther, when she becomes queen, does not reveal to King Achashverosh that she is Jewish. She keeps this fundamental aspect of her identity concealed – like so many Jews have in the past centuries when they have been confronted with anti-Semitism. We hope to build a world in which nobody needs to afraid to reveal their true identity for fear of attack or reprisal.
At a moment of need, when Esther realizes that she must intervene in order to save her people – the Jewish people – from impending genocide, she courageously approached the King. At great personal risk, Esther went to speak to the King without being summoned by him, and reveals to him that there is a plot to commit genocide against her people. She takes off her mask and is her most authentic self. It was a great risk to take off her mask, but in the end it proved to be the most effective way to prevent terrible events from taking place.

As we see the young and the young at heart get dressed up for Purim, let us remember that there are still people in the world who need to wear masks to protect themselves. Let us remember that leadership is sometimes practiced effectively behind the scenes and out of the spotlight. And let us remember that it is sometimes necessary to take off the masks that we wear in order to achieve truly great outcomes. Happy Purim to you and your family!

PETITIONS, MEMORIALS AND OTHER PAPERS

First Citizen Award presented by Dr. Papenfuse

First Citizen Awards, 2015: Senator Currie, Senator Kasemeyer, and Secretary Brinkley

Senator Ulysses S. Currie:

Defining and separating the line between public responsibilities and private work for a citizen legislator with a part–time salary can prove to be a bumpy highway. Senator Currie has had to confront a Federal jury, a hostile press, and his senate peers because of his private work as a consultant, and his own inadequate record keeping. He faced up to the challenges and was acquitted of all criminal charges, but he also refused to make excuses. He characterized himself as a person with flaws and weaknesses, and vowed to do better, which in the eyes of his colleagues and his constituents who re–elected him last fall by over a 92% majority, he has continued to do. Today the Senate of Maryland pays tribute to his devotion to this institution, and to the unceasing attention he gives to the causes to which he assigns high priority, especially funding education and finding equal employment opportunities for those who need it most. From sharecropper’s son and the tobacco fields of North Carolina to being a school principal and a long serving member of the Maryland Legislature, the Maryland Senate presents Ulysses S. Currie its First Citizen Award for 2015.

Senator Edward J. Kasemeyer:

Having appeared before Senator Kasemeyer to defend the Archives budget, I have personal knowledge of his attention to budget details and the wisdom with which he approaches the difficult task of balancing a budget in which projected income seems to always fall short of reality. As the Howard County Times put it, he is a ‘powerful’ senator who prefers to work largely out of the spotlight. One county council member described him as “a thoughtful, pragmatic official and one of the most adept politicians at balancing competing interests.” First elected to the House of Delegates in 1982, he was elected to the state senate in 1986, lost the next election, but was returned in 1994 where he has served ever since, rising to the critically important position of chairman of Budget and Taxation. As President Miller has said on at least one occasion, Senator Kasemeyer never raises his voice, but when he rises to speak, people listen. As one of his Republican colleagues points out, “He’s somebody who’s willing to listen to all sides. He’s approachable and he’s fair.” In many ways that is the essence of a First Citizen, especially when it is combined, as it is in Senator Kasemeyer, with a work ethic that produces results on behalf of his constituents and all the people of Maryland. To Senator Edward J. Kasemeyer, the Maryland Senate presents its First Citizen Award for 2015.

Budget Secretary David R. Brinkley:

To be a member of the loyal opposition in hammering out fiscal policy and then to join the executive branch in an effort to both implement and shepherd that policy in new directions takes courage and considerable fortitude, especially when your party is not in the majority.
David Brinkley has the reputation of both a large capacity for detailed budget related work and a willingness to seek solutions based upon compromise and political reality, as long, of course, as the budget is balanced and the overall costs of government are restrained, and where possible, reduced. In many respects his political mantra might be the wisdom of Benjamin Franklin at the 1787 Constitutional Convention who in his final speech to the delegates praised their willingness to accept the outcome of compromise, even though it might not have approached the perfection that had been sought by the individual members.

Perhaps Secretary Brinkley and all honorees today would agree with Franklin’s personal observation that

... [the older he grew, the more apt he was to doubt his own judgment, and to pay more respect to the judgment of others]. Most men indeed as well as most sects in Religion, think themselves in possession of all truth [said Franklin, but]... few express it so naturally as a certain French lady, who in a dispute with her sister, said “I don’t know how it happens, Sister but I meet with no body but myself, that’s always in the right – Il n’y a que moi qui a toujours raison.”

In any event, it is with respect and appreciation for his devotion to the public interest and his determination to master the complexities of proposing budgetary policies as well as working through the inevitable results of compromise, that the Maryland Senate presents David R. Brinkley with its First Citizen Award of 2015.
