The Maryland Department of Health and the Maryland Insurance Administration are required to annually report certain information specified in §15-407 of the Health-General Article on the effectiveness of the Long-Term Care Partnership Program (“Program”). This report addresses, as of July 1, 2019: (i) the effectiveness of the Program; (ii) the impact of the Program on State expenditures for medical assistance; (iii) the number of enrollees in the Program; and (iv) the number of long-term care policies offered in the State under the Program.

The Program permits Maryland residents to purchase certain long-term care insurance policies that not only pay for expenses associated with the costs of long-term care, but also are taken into account when the insured applies for Medicaid. Each dollar that the long-term care policy pays for an insured is subtracted from the insured’s assets at the time of application for Medicaid for determining eligibility for Medicaid. For example, if a Partnership policy pays $100,000 of benefits for an insured, when that insured applies for Medicaid, $100,000 of the insured’s assets will not be counted. This is attractive to insureds who are interested in passing these assets on to heirs.

The Program is still in its early stages. The first companies certified to sell Program policies in Maryland began selling such policies in 2010. Since the inception of the Program, 14 insurers have been certified to sell this coverage, but four of these insurers have since withdrawn from Maryland’s long-term care market and the long-term care market nationwide.¹ Additionally, one carrier² ceased offering long-term care insurance in Maryland as of August 1, 2012, but has not withdrawn the contracts from use in anticipation of a more favorable future market. These market withdrawals and cessation of sales do not impact those individuals who purchased Program policies from the withdrawing insurer. Program policies are guaranteed renewable for life and will continue to provide Program benefits to the insureds covered under the policies.

Insurers have received approval to sell 58 different long-term care policies as Program policies in Maryland’s non-group (or “individual”) market.³ One insurer is selling this coverage in both the group and individual markets.⁴ While long-term care insurance can be sold as a stand-alone policy, it also may be sold as an additional benefit to a life insurance or an annuity contract in Maryland. To date, no insurer has applied for certification to enroll Maryland residents in the Program in Maryland through an additional benefit to a life insurance or an annuity contract. Instead, all of the Program policies are being marketed as stand-alone long-term care insurance policies.

The Maryland regulations governing Program policies were amended, effective June 6, 2016, to reduce the minimum inflation protection benefit that is required to be purchased by an applicant who is younger than 61 years of age in order for the policy to meet the requirements of a long-term care partnership policy.⁵ Under the amended regulations, an individual who is younger than 61 years of age is required to purchase an inflation protection benefit of at least 1% compounded annually, reduced from the prior requirement of at least 3% compounded annually. This change will reduce the premium for a long-term care partnership policy for individuals under the age of 61 and may permit more individuals to purchase a long-term care partnership policy.

² American General Life Insurance Company.

³ The number of the policies listed is higher than the number found in Table 1 due to two factors: (1) four carriers have withdrawn from the Program; and (2) a number of the carriers in the Program have developed new policies since the Program began and have ceased selling the older policies.

In order for the State to ascertain the effectiveness of the Program, insurers are required to file annual reports with the Maryland Insurance Administration reporting several metrics associated with the Program, including the number of policies sold, the number of enrollees, the number of long-term care partnership policies that are offered in Maryland under the Program, and the number of licensed insurance producers that have met the Maryland training requirements for the sale of long-term care insurance.

- insurers that are certified to participate in the Program,
- the date each insurer was certified to participate in the Program,
- the number of enrollees in the Program as of July 1, 2019,
- the number of Program policies the insurer has issued or delivered in Maryland for the 12-month period ending on July 1, 2019,
- the number of Program policy forms available in Maryland as of July 1, 2019, and
- the number of insurance producers that had met the training requirements for the sale of long-term care insurance for each insurer participating in the Program during the reporting period of July 1, 2018—June 30, 2019.

Table 2, which is based on data included in Table 1 and on similar data included in prior annual reports, demonstrates that the Program grew slowly and steadily during the first six years of existence. By July 1, 2010, the first year that Program policies were available in Maryland, seven insurers had been certified to participate in the Program, but only 57 policies were sold, covering 65 individuals. In comparison, by July 1, 2015, the Program had grown to cover 13,613 individuals through 14 different insurers. By July 1, 2016, the number of Program enrollees had decreased slightly to 13,202, and this decrease was due almost entirely to the decline in enrollment of a single carrier.⁸ Over the next three years, enrollment under the Program resumed a slow and steady growth pattern, reaching 14,492 enrollees by July 1, 2019. However, no new insurers have been certified to participate in the Program since 2015.

One requirement for participation in the Program is that the long-term care insurance policy offered by the insurer meets the requirements for a qualified long-term care insurance policy. The requirements for a qualified long-term care insurance policy are set forth in federal law and Maryland regulations. In Maryland, there are 13 insurers that are currently approved to sell qualified long-term care insurance policies in the individual market and one insurer that is currently approved to sell qualified long-term care insurance policies in the group market.

Currently, it is too early to assess the impact of the Program on State expenditures for medical assistance. Since long-term care insurance policies are medically underwritten and are issued only to individuals who are unlikely to need long-term care services in the near future, usually there are a number of years from the time a policy is issued to the time claims are made under the policy. It is expected that an individual who purchases long-term care insurance will have protection under the long-term care insurance policy for long-term care needs and will not need to apply for Medicaid until a later date than an individual of the same means who has not purchased this coverage. As a result, Medicaid costs for long-term care may be substantially reduced. However, the extent of savings to the Medicaid program is expected to occur in the distant future.
